

Abstract

The aim of this work is to find and to describe the importance of social workers in therapeutic community for drug addicts in the field of social rehabilitation. Using a quantitative method of data collection has been identified that the social worker in therapeutic community for drug addicts is an integral part of the process of client social rehabilitation. This finding is a confirmation of the theory of several experts who claim that social worker is an important part of the professional team and thus he also plays an important role in social rehabilitation process of the clients.