

Annotation

In the first chapter will be described a history of Jews in The Russian Empire and Soviet Union. We need this chapter to understand that a question of Jews in a Russian army is a very special phenomenon and this part of thesis helps us to understand demographical, political and economical situation of certain period. In additional, on the base of these dates we could predict procentual ratio of Jews in the Red army and understand that Jews were not a single and specific occurrence but had a spread character.

Second chapter is about Russian army and about its creation, goals and this chapter will answer the question why it appeared. The main aspect of this part will be concentrated on The Red Army as the special phenomenon. Further, there will be an attempt to analyze decrees and laws, which were published in the period from 1917 to 1945.

The last chapter summarizes knowledges of previous two chapters. This chapter has a scientific approach to the problem of Jews in the Russian Army. There are given certain facts, names and surnames. Also, a great attention is paid for question of antisemitism inside of The Red army and partisan groups.