

Abstract in English

The aim of this bachelor thesis is mapping both electronic and printed information resources and services for the field of sociology. Mentioned sources include information about their content, possibilities of use and their availability for those interested in the field, especially students, teachers and researchers of Charles University. The introductory part introduces sociology and theory about information resources. The resources themselves are introduced in the next part, starting with electronic resources from the web and also from professional databases. Furthermore, the thesis describes resources published in both electronic and printed form – sociology periodicals. The final part of the thesis is dedicated to one specialized library and two university libraries. Thesis provides information of the composition of their printed documents and of other resources and services of these libraries. This thesis was compiled by search of electronic resources and processing of information obtained from library staffs.
