

The aim of this study is to find whether the middle-aged people know preventive measures in case of risky diseases. Its theoretical part lists health insurance companies and their preventive programmes. The following part describes selected diseases. The thord part is focused on research and finds out the approach of middle aged people to prevention, their way of spending leisure, working duties and lifestyle.