

This diploma paper concerns with mucous affections of buccal cavity. The theme is organized in terms of aetiology and differential diagnosis. Oral mucosal manifestations may be the initial feature, the most florid clinical feature, or the only sign of diseases, therefore physical examination of buccal cavity may bring important information.

The paper encloses a rich supplement of colour illustrations, to provide visual experience, which is very important for examination and assessment of mucous affections.