

Abstract

Bachelor thesis „Drinking regime in terms of evidence based medicine“ is focused on complex take on the topic of fluid intake based on current knowledge and most recent studies. The content of this work consists of body water function and hydration theoretical summary. Based on this summary is experimental part which should confirm the relationship between hydration and performance.