

Abstract

The aim of this bachelor's thesis is to map God's Word in pastoral care of the sick. And getting these questions to be answered: By which methods is the God's Word utilized in the pastoral care of the sick?

In an introduction of this thesis I will look into the usage of the Word of God in a pastoral care, defining the Word of God's source, its main effect on the pastoral care and the difference between The Spoken Word of God and The Incarnated Word. In addition, the thesis will focused on the Spoken Word – in the Testament and how to work with it. It determines a dissimilarity of the Word of God's impact on a everyday life and in a disease. In the second preparatory chapter I will deal with the pastoral care defined by a pastoral conversation and its principles. I will also describe theological aspects of illness, an overview on death and sickness seeing with eyes of Faith. In an analytical chapter I will examine literature sources related to exact topics later to be thoroughly analyzed. In the final synthetic analyse I will emphasize particular crucial topics.

A methodology of work: by an analytical-critical method I will analyse effective pastoral care of the sick noticed in literature sources. It will also classify individual segments to be further

Keywords: the word of God, the sacramenta, a healing process, pastoral care of the patients
