

Abstract

The diploma thesis aim is to describe the professional life of teachers in the Příbram region in the period of so-called normalization, furthermore describing changes in the profession - especially in connection with the period of transformation, and after it. The presented text is an oral-historical probe into the daily life of teachers, capturing a view from their perspective. An equally important research topic is the culture and environment of primary schools, therefore the "normalization" of the educational process, where the educated generation was the first to find employment in the post-november era and in a way helped in the Czechoslovak's society transformation process after 1989, including market mechanisms and the restoration of democracy itself.

Key words:

Primary school, methods of oral history, normalization period, transformation period, teachers.