The aim of this thesis is to clearly summarize the current knowledge about lung occupational diseases, emphasize prevention options and assess trends in the number of reported Professional lung disease between 1999 and 2006. Statistical data were obtained from the Central Register of Occupational Diseases, which is conducted at the Center work

Medicine of the National Health Institute in Prague