The goal of this thesis is to introduce weighted finite automata (WFA) as a means of representing multi-resolution raster images. We explain the basic concepts of weighted finite automata. Then we describe an encoding algorithm that converts an image into a WFA and a decoding algorithm that can generate back the original image. We then provide our implementation of the encoding and decoding algorithms.