

Abstract

This thesis deals with current legal regulations of administrative proceedings in the field of real estate cadastre. First, it outlines the historical context of the real estate cadastre. It also deals with the structure of administrative bodies operating in the field of real estate cadastre. Furthermore, it outlines some important principles related to the real estate cadastre. The main emphasis is placed on the administrative proceedings of registering a real property title in the real estate cadastre, while also describing the possibilities of legal defence against the decision of the cadastral office. Finally, the thesis discusses two additional types of cadastral entries apart from title registration, which are known as notation and entry.
