

Abstract

This thesis deals with the issue of third party liability for a child in Czech private law. Its aim is to analyse the basic legal relationship between parent and child, to define their mutual rights and obligations and to describe the concept of delegation of these to a third party. Particular attention is paid to the liability of third persons in the exercise of the rights and obligations so conferred under Act No. 192/2021 Coll., which amended Act No. 89/2012 Coll., the Civil Code, with effect from 1 July 2021. A separate chapter deals with the liability of third persons for harm, specifying further the liability for harm caused by the child and harm caused to the child. With the help of an analysis of recent case law, the thesis outlines the possibilities of minimising the risk of such liability.
