

ABSTRAKT

This Bachelor thesis presents research into occurring mental illnesses in selected members of the Habsburg dynasty, with an effort to best contextualise them from the original historical background and to compare them with current knowledge. At the same time, it will describe the marriage policy that contributed to the emergence of mental illness in individual members. The aim of the work is to get acquainted with the Habsburg dynasty, characterize the mental disorders occurring in this magnificent dynasty and evaluate the manifestations of individual diseases.