

ABSTRACT

TITLE: Methodology of parafloorball

OBJECTIVE: The main aim of the thesis was to methodically elaborate the issue of para floorball and the revision of the rules based on floorball and its rules, when difficult situations arise for the referee to judge whether it is an offence or not.

METHODS: The research was conducted by analysis and observation. Thus, the main method was the observation of photographs or video recordings and the observation of league matches, supplemented where appropriate by questions. The results of document analysis and observation were elaborated in the results section by analysis or more detailed description, supplemented by photographs and references to video recordings of league matches.

RESULTS: In the results section of the thesis, situations or examples of selected offences were analysed and described in detail. For each, the values of the offence, i.e. the amount of punishment for committing the offence, were recorded. The given situations were supplemented with photographs or links to videos of matches in which the situation can be viewed for illustration purposes. Furthermore, for some offences, aspects or factors that may influence the referees' assessment of the offences were evaluated.
