

This thesis explores the practical use of generalized linear models. The aim of the thesis is to analyze the claims inflation for Motor Third Party Liability Insurance. For this purpose, current data from a Czech insurance company are provided. In the thesis, a generalized linear model is constructed in detail based on specified criteria. From the model, the effect of inflation is identified and its value for the given period is determined.