

Abstract

This thesis focuses on the phenomenon of esports, i.e. professional computer gaming, after the coronavirus pandemic. The theoretical part is devoted to the industry as such, focusing on the development of global esports, offline tournaments and broadcasting platforms. The practical part uses mixed-methods research to explore in depth the Czech esports, its transformation during the pandemic and its state in 2023.