Abstract

The target of the thesis is to develop a software tool for simulation of various symptoms of selected mental health disorders (e.g. depression, schizophrenia, etc.) using virtual reality (VR). This software will be applied as an education tool to provide insight and increase both understanding of symptoms and empathy in students studying psychiatry, clinical psychology or general medicine.