

Abstract:

This thesis is further developing and extending the theme of the my bachelor's thesis, which is focused on jewelry of the Great Moravian horizon in the territory of Bohemia and Slovakia. The first question deals with the distribution of individual types of "Great Moravian" jewelry, mainly by looking for distribution patterns of individual types. The second question deals with the age of the deceased and the number of jewels in the grave equipment. The last third question deals with the social role of luxury jewelry in early medieval society. The purpose of this thesis is to contribute to the understanding of the mechanisms of the distribution of luxury objects throughout society in the early Middle Ages.
