

This bachelor's thesis deals with the Minkowski sum of two non-convex polygons in the plane. Specifically, it focuses on describing and comparing two methods for computing the Minkowski sum: the decomposition method and the convolution method. This thesis provides a detailed presentation of both methods, including necessary definitions and illustrative images. In the final chapter, both methods are compared using the CGAL C++ library on various inputs.