Course of defence: [in person] The student articulated her thesis defence, focusing on the justification of the case selection, the data collected, and expectations prior to the beginning the research. Then she mentions the effects of vaccine campaigns in both countries and their differences. Dr Hájek redirects the defence towards the main findings, contribution, and limitations. The student elaborates more on the limitations of the data collected and how the argument has shortcomings.

[CU Board]: Dr Franek mentions the reviewers' comments regarding a better-defined hypothesis and limitations of the methodology. The student agrees on the research limitations given the chosen period. Dr Franek enquires in the supervisor selection and Dr Hájek on the case selection since there can be more than a personal motivation for comparative selection.
