

Abstract

The bachelor thesis deals with the poetic work of the writer Irma Geisslová (1855-1914). On the basis of a chronological overview, description and analysis focused primarily on the themes, motifs and poetic practices of the author's individual published collections, the thesis aims to capture the characteristic features, forms and transformations of Geisslová's poetry, while reflecting, to the extent necessary, her contemporary responses and criticism.