

The aim of this bachelor thesis is to translate a part of the third chapter of the book Explaining Hitler by the American author Ron Rosenbaum. The selected excerpt discusses the German newspaper the Munich Post that was being published until 1933 and focuses on the crucial role its editors played during Hitler's rise to power. The thesis also includes a translation analysis of the source text, a description of the translation method, a typology of translation procedures and shifts as well as an analysis of the translation problems.
