

Abstract:

The main aim of this bachelor thesis is to provide an adequate Czech translation of Cicero's Ninth Phillipica, which has not been translated into Czech yet. Furthermore, the thesis contains an analysis of Cicero's arguments used in this speech. The analysis concentrates on a comprehensible explanation of Cicero's main arguments. In particular, attention is paid to the gradual development of the arguments and the way Cicero operates with them and presents them before the Roman Senate. In addition, this work outlines the historical and literary context of the composition of the Ninth Phillipica, and finally, it also briefly introduces the person of Servius Sulpicius Rufus, whose posthumous tributes are the subject of this speech.
