Abstract

This thesis delves into the far-right extremist movement QAnon, known for its affinity for Donald Trump and continuous propagation of conspiracy theories. The movement has gained notoriety through violent outbursts, with the attempted insurrection on January 6th, 2021, acting as a symbol of violent and anti-democratic activity. The objective of this thesis is to take an explorative and qualitative snapshot of the movement in order to understand its activity, beliefs, dynamics, and potential for future implications. The thesis focuses on QAnon's reproduction of the election fraud theory, a central element of the extensive conspiracy nexus. For this, the textual content disseminated through QAnon channels on Telegram, which constitutes a popular platform in the scene, is collected for this purpose. Additionally, in light of the movement's international expansion, a transnational comparison of the election fraud theory is undertaken. Germany, next to the United States, presents itself as a suitable country for comparison due to QAnon's extensive activity and presence.

A qualitative content analysis is employed in order to identify concepts and categories in the QAnon U.S. and German textual corpus, which are then compared transnationally for similarities, differences, and patterns. The results highlight a strong similarity in the reproduction of the election fraud conspiracy theory with a predominantly U.S. centric theme in both countries' content. Based on this finding, the research establishes an explanatory mechanism, emphasizing the overarching importance of shared ideology over country specific factors, U.S. centralism in the movement, and a core-to-periphery dissemination process. Consequently, the research points to a transnationally synchronized, borderless, and U.S. centric movement. Lastly, this thesis stresses the far-right extremist theme as a security threat to democracies, which is clearly reflected in the content and the findings.

Abstrakt

Tato práce se zabývá krajně pravicovým extremistickým hnutím QAnon, které je známé svou náklonností k Donaldu Trumpovi a neustálým šířením konspiračních teorií. Hnutí se proslavilo násilnými projevy, přičemž pokus o povstání 6. ledna 2021 působil jako symbol násilné a protidemokratické činnosti. Cílem této práce je provést průzkumný a kvalitativní snímek hnutí, aby bylo možné porozumět jeho činnosti, přesvědčení, dynamice a potenciálu budoucích důsledků. Práce se zaměřuje na reprodukci teorie volebních podvodů ze strany QAnon, která je ústředním prvkem rozsáhlého konspiračního řetězce. Za tímto účelem je shromáždění textový obsah šířený prostřednictvím kanálů QAnon na Telegramu, který ukazuje populární platformu na pravicovo-extrémistické scéně. Kromě toho je s ohledem na mezinárodní rozšíření hnutí provedeno nadnárodní srovnání teorie volebních podvodů. Německo se vedle Spojených států ukazuje jako vhodná země pro srovnání vzhledem k rozsáhlé aktivitě a přítomnosti hnutí QAnon.

Kvalitativní obsahová analýza slouží k identifikaci pojmů a kategorií v americkém a německém textovém souboru QAnon, které jsou následně porovnávány v mezinárodním měřítku s ohledem na podobnosti, rozdíly a vzorce. Výsledky poukazují na silnou podobnost v reprodukci konspirační teorie o volebních podvodech s převážně americkou tématikou v obsahu obou zemí. Na základě tohoto zjištění je zaveden vysvětlující mechanismus, který zdůrazňuje zastřešující význam sdílené ideologie nad faktory specifickými pro jednotlivé země, americký centralismus v hnutí a proces šíření z jádra na periferii. V důsledku toho výzkum poukazuje na nadnárodně synchronizované, bezhraniční a na USA centralizované hnutí. V neposlední řadě tato práce zdůrazňuje téma krajně pravicového extremismu jako bezpečnostní hrozby pro demokracie, což se jasně odráží v obsahu a zjištěních.

1. Introduction

The roots of modern democracies worldwide have been established by free, and fair elections, which empower individuals to actively participate in politics and be represented in government. Therefore, accepting the election results is necessary for a seamless transfer of authority and a functional, democratic state (Arceneaux and Truex, 2022, p. 1). But what if extremist movements are willing to undertake anything, including violence, in order to see their candidate win? The pro-Trump and far-right QAnon movement has provided a glimpse into this reality in 2021.

1.1 The Emergence of QAnon

On January 6th, QAnon supporters joined the deadly insurrection attempt on the Capitol Hill grounds (Collins and Zadrozny, 2021; Zou and Logan, 2022). A mob of hundreds attacked the Capitol and interrupted the election vote count, which was held to validate Joe Biden's win (Cohen and Lotz, 2022). This day embedded itself in U.S. history as a peak of violence carried out by those in support of then-President Donald Trump, his continuous allegations and dissemination of the election fraud conspiracy theory, and his denial of Joe Biden's win. Among the crowd of those storming the Capitol, the supporters of QAnon stood out with their symbols of a big "Q" that could be spotted on banners and articles of clothing, symbolizing their allegiance (The Washington Post, 2021). Later, it was uncovered that this attack had been planned weeks earlier with explicit calls for violence in order to achieve a recount of the votes (Collins and Zadrozny, 2021).

What prior had been a closed movement to the public, operating on the outskirts of public consciousness, has now launched itself center stage in law enforcement investigations. Considering the explicit calls for deadly violence that have been uncovered in follow-up investigations, in combination with the violent eruption on January 6th, QAnon is a radicalizing and dangerous player in the conspiracy scene (Amarasingam and Argentino, 2020; Collins and Zadrozny, 2021; Jensen and Kane, 2021).

Furthermore, the impact of QAnon is felt far beyond the confines of this particular incident. The movement has expanded into different political and national spheres, such as Europe (Reynaud and Brandy, 2022). Also, in the U.S. as well as globally, QAnon has been undermining public health measures undertaken to contain COVID-19, which is reflected in the persistent circulation of conspiracy theories about the pandemic and the vaccines (Dover, 2023). These developments showcase the seriousness and infectious nature of the current wave of conspiracy movements in connection to the rise of violent and anti-establishment attitudes. QAnon poses a substantial risk to democracies and democratic practices around the world and should not be dismissed lightly.

1.2 Researching QAnon

In light of QAnon's acceptance of and engagement in violence and disruption of democratic processes, as seen by its participation in the riot on January 6th, as well as its successful international expansions, QAnon is a novel force that needs to be examined more in detail. The aim of the thesis is therefore to shed light on the scene and understand its motivations through a recollection and analysis of the disseminated content, which provides an insight into the group's argumentation, fears and consequently also draws a picture of future plans. Considering the abundance of potential theories promoted by QAnon, in combination with the significance of elections and the enormous repercussions of past election denialism, the election fraud conspiracy theory is selected.

Subsequently, upon further consideration, the question arises as to how election fraud is discussed by QAnon. It is unclear whether there are any variations or patterns in the reproduction of the conspiracy theory in the U.S. and internationally. To address this, the social media outlets of QAnon groups linked to the United States and Germany are focused on and compared. Social media as a tool offers a fitting format for such an analysis, as it functions as a communication and dissemination platform and is freely accessible.

Besides QAnon's origin and primary base in the U.S. (Argentino and Wildon, 2021), the German QAnon movement shows itself to be of exceptional relevance. First, according to polls, the beliefs and theories spread by the movement also find support among the German public (Holnburger, Lamberty and Goedke Tort, 2022, pp. 28–31). Also, as of 2022 there is evidence that Germany is the biggest hub for QAnon support outside of the U.S. (Holnburger, Lamberty and Goedke Tort, 2022, p. 40). Second, a German domestic terrorist group has taken inspiration from the QAnon ideology, which resulted in plans to overthrow the German government (Bergengruen, 2022). Also, the racially motivated shooting in Hanau in early 2020 was apparently influenced by QAnon (Huesmann, 2020a; Piper, 2020). In his manifesto, the attacker aligned himself with the paranoid thinking of the movement and the dissemination of conspiracy theories (Speit, 2021). Given this background, Germany has proven itself to be fertile ground for conspiracy theories (Schultheis, 2022).

Additionally, through the introduction of the international comparison of the election fraud theory reproduction, the dynamic, cohesiveness, and QAnon's potential to internationally adapt and possibly overcome borders and connect to already existing systems and structures are incorporated. Ignoring or even dismissing these potential strategies would be a disservice to democracies and their institutions. Ultimately, given the strong focus on Donald Trump in the QAnon scene and the recent allegations of election fraud in the U.S. presidential elections, this thesis starts out with the exploration of those U.S.-based claims with the possibility of integrating them into a broader discussion (Roose, 2021). The time frame, which is discussed in greater detail in the methodology section, is chosen as the period of the public hearings on the January 6th investigation in the United States.

Consequently, the first research question goes accordingly:

> RQ1: "How is the election fraud theory reproduced in the selected Telegram channels in the time period from the 9th of June to 19th of December 2022?"

Based on the analyzed and compared data of the U.S. and German QAnon content, the second research question constructs the explanatory mechanism:

> RQ2: "What explanatory mechanism can be constructed for the variations and commonalities of the content?"

This step is vital to understanding potential causal drivers, as the conspiracy theory material is only able to provide limited rational insight for an outsider without contextualization. Furthermore, it adds an interpretative element to the analysis of the first descriptive research question, allowing for theoretical contextualization and integration.

1.3 Further Procedure

In the upcoming chapters, the thesis starts out with the conceptualization of QAnon and conspiracy theories. It then gives a thorough and multifaceted literature review to help readers grasp the current status in research. Afterwards the methodology is developed, and the empirical findings are presented and organized, based on the nationality of selected channels. This is followed by the hypotheses and explanatory mechanism, alternative explanations, limitations, and concluding remarks.

2. Defining Key Concepts

This chapter sets out to define the key concepts that are being discussed in this thesis, such as QAnon, far-right extremism and the election fraud conspiracy theory as a means to guarantee conceptual and research clarity.

2.1 QAnon and Far-right Extremism

2.1.1 The World of QAnon

A distinct conceptual clarification on QAnon is still in its infant stages as research has been ambiguous in its definition of it (Garry et al., 2021, p. 204). For the purpose of this analysis, this thesis understands QAnon as a movement, which is in line with Diani's (1992) movement conceptualization.

Movements are defined as follows:

> "networks of informal interactions between plurality of individual, groups and/or organizations, engaged in political or cultural conflict, on the basis of shared collective identities " (Diani, 1992, p. 1).

QAnon is comprised of a network of followers that can be found online and offline, share a belief system and a common ideology (Roose, 2021; Wendling, 2021). This assessment is also mirrored in other publications on QAnon (Argentino and Wildon, 2021; Fielitz, Schwarz and Hitzinger, 2020).

The movement, which originated in late 2017 on 4chan[1], was started by an anonymous 4chan user named "Q", who claimed to have access to classified information from the U.S. government (Roose, 2021). As users post anonymously on the platform, the movement's name, "QAnon", emerged as a fusion (Argentino and Amarasingam, 2020). However, the movement only really took off in popularity and follower numbers during the COVID-19 pandemic and the following worldwide lockdowns (Kużelewska and Tomaszuk, 2022, p. 2377). Since its beginning, users have flocked around the "Q drops", as the online revelations are called, in order to decipher and interpret allegedly hidden pro-Trump messages (Amarasingam and Argentino, 2020, p. 37; Wendling, 2021).

[1] 4chan is an anonymous online forum that has served as a hotbed for hoaxes and disinformation in the past (Dewey 2014).

The core of the belief system can be traced back to antisemitic rhetoric and the recurrent use of conspiracy themes about the Cabal, pedophilia, and a hidden secret government ruled by the wealthy called the "Deep State" (Kaiser, 2022; Rahn and Patterson, 2021). A strong undercurrent of the antisemitic themes is centered around the ritual abuse and murder of children through prominent political figures such as the Clinton family or philanthropic personalities of Jewish descent like George Soros (Anti Defamation League, 2020; Dittrich et al., 2020, p. 20; Roose, 2021). According to their beliefs, the Deep State elite will be brought to justice through mass arrests and imprisonments acted out through figures like Donald Trump in a key event named "The Storm" (Anti Defamation League, 2020).

QAnon is able to adapt to newly arising circumstances by adjusting their theories to recent events, which contributes to its pull on people and success in the scene as they are able to participate in the narration (Huesmann, 2020b). Also, the followers are able to use their own interpretive skills to decipher allegedly hidden messages and go on a treasure hunt for more evidence of a conspiracy (Zuckerman, 2019). Lobo (2020) points to the fact that personal involvement leads its believers to associate the interpreted theory with an elevated feeling of value, something that has been coined the "Ikea effect".

While acting and connecting online, the United States seem to be the geographical center, with prominent figures in politics up to the former president Donald Trump either endorsing or repeating the beliefs of QAnon (Argentino and Wildon, 2021; Klepper and Swenson, 2022). QAnon supporters are one of the prominent coherent factions found online and offline that demand the renouncement of Biden's presidency and the reinstatement of Donald Trump as the rightful President effective immediately (Collins, 2020; Seitz, 2021). In terms of demography, the movement draws in a more diverse crowd, including non-white groups such as Black and Hispanic individuals (Tufts Public Opinion Lab, 2021).

This demographic composition is one of the differentiating factors that sets QAnon apart from similar and potentially overlapping movements. For example, QAnon supporters who have committed a criminal offense are often women, contrary to the typical criminal offender demography. Furthermore, the supporters engage in crimes despite being married or being a legal guardian for their children, both factors considered to typically counteract the likeliness of committing a crime (Jensen and Kane, 2021, p. 10).

Also, QAnon can be distinguished to a certain degree from movements such as the sovereign citizens, as the latter encompasses an array of fictional countries even within a real country, believe in their own constitutions, borders, and heads of state (van Laak, 2013). Due to these often very specific and potentially contesting views, the movement is generally broken up into loosely connected groups (Fiebig and Koehler, 2022, pp. 35–36; ISD, n.d.). Given the hostile attitude towards the Biden administration an ideological overlap can be observed (Anti Defamantion League, 2022). Yet, QAnon, at least at the time of research, seeks a U.S. government under Trump, which points to a selective aversion against authority. In the German context, QAnon might intersection with movements such as Querdenken, which has emerged in Germany as a response to the COVID-19 measures. Here an integration of the Querdenken movement into QAnon can be detected, as the German group is struggling to find purpose in absence of government installed pandemic regulations (Metzger, 2022; Nocun, 2020). Overall, distinctions can be made, but individuals are multifaceted and hence are able to engage in different movements at once, especially when they overlap in ideology.

2.1.2 Ideological Placement of QAnon

Looking at the ideological placement on the political spectrum, several publications have argued that QAnon's beliefs encapsulate a far-right extremist stance (Dittrich et al., 2020; Forberg, 2021; Garry et al., 2021). Not only is the ideology popular among far-right crowds (Dittrich et al., 2020, p. 38), but QAnon also discusses topics that are relevant to this political scene (Hoseini et al., 2023, p. 76). The movement has assimilated its ideology into that of already pre-existing far-right movements and therefore has been able to overlap with and integrate into the scene (Garry et al., 2021, p. 162). Also, based on Gerster et al.'s (2021, p. 40) work on QAnon related Telegram chats, the movement, while propagating conspiracy theories, is clearly catering to far-right ideas, such as historical revisionism or anti-democratic views. Moreover, Dittrich et al. (2020, p. 36) position QAnon on the right-wing extremist spectrum. Additionally, QAnon is also explicitly mentioned as an actor in the realm of violent extremism that is motivated by conspiracy theories (Basit, 2021, p. 6). Lastly, this assessment can be supported by looking independently at the movement. The terminology of far-right acts as an umbrella term, regardless, this thesis focuses on the anti-democratic and hence revisionist far-right tropes found in the QAnon movement.

Far-right groups show signs of nationalism, xenophobia, strong state favoritism, anti-democracy attitudes, and racism (Mudde, 2000, p. 11). Depending on the defining source, these features can also be rounded off through the addition of anti-system populism (Della Porta, Wagemann and Caiani, 2012, pp. 5–6). Essentially speaking, extremism refers to behavior carried out in opposition to the accepted norms of society (Fleming, 2014, p. 395; Kruglanski et al., 2017, p. 218). In a political sense, the extremist element emerges in the opposition to democratic values in combination with aggressive and potentially violent behavior towards political or social opponents (Della Porta, Wagemann and Caiani, 2012, p. 6). Understandably, this is only a superficial provision of the extremist concept. However, as the research on extremism has its own designated place in academia, an in-depth re-evaluation would overtake the limitations of this thesis.

In the case of QAnon, the far-right extremist features are reflected in its politically violent and anti-democratic actions. The movement has been involved in the preparation for a political insurrection, engaged in the riots on January 6th (Collins and Zadrozny, 2021), as well as in its rhetoric of disseminating racist, antisemitic, and xenophobic conspiracy theories (Willaert et al., 2022). Therefore, the placement of QAnon in the far-right extremist scene, based on the presented examples and academic evidence, is warranted.

2.2. Conspiring about the Election

In order to place the election fraud theory in the conspiracy nexus, the conspiracy theory itself is conceptualized and structured.

2.2.1 The Role of Conspiracy Theories

The conceptualization of conspiracy theories is often as puzzling as the content itself (Li et al., 2023). Nevertheless, in general terms, the conspiracy theory consists of two elements, the conspiracy, and the theory about it.

The conspiracy consists of:

> "a secret arrangement between two or more actors to usurp political or economic power, violate established rights, hoard vital secrets, or unlawfully alter government institutions" (Uscinski and Parent, 2014, p. 31).

Therefore, the conspiracy theory is defined as an approach of interpreting a significant and often historical event believed to be the work of an influential circle of conspirators, the conspiracy (Reid, 2023). For those sensing a conspiracy, the time frame is open to past, present, or future events (Uscinski and Parent, 2014, pp. 32–34). Often, those who believe that they are uncovering a conspiracy, argue based on seemingly hidden patterns and connections (Holoyda, 2022, p. 2). In many aspects, the conspiracy theory may be seen as a storytelling mechanism, used as a transmission channel, conveying underlying messages, themes and values within a society (Raab et al., 2013, pp. 7–8).

Therefore, a conspiracy theory is constructed through several different narratives. The narrative acts as a presentation instrument that builds and establishes the group's identity, gives meaning to and carries the recollection of events, and therefore ties the group in as the main protagonists (Weil, 2022, pp. 20–21).

Individuals, particularly during times of societal crisis, have a tendency to imagine conspiracies in order to cope with sensations such as fear and uncertainty (van Prooijen and Douglas, 2017, pp. 328–330). Furthermore, the theories might affect how society recollects an event, which has substantial consequences for the historical narratives (van Prooijen and Douglas, 2017, pp. 329–330). As a result, conspiracy theories, while often supported by anecdotical evidence rather than facts, play an important role in the political conversation and in societal dynamics. The lack of evidence is often taken as a sign of the existence of a powerful group that is acting from the shadows, providing a circular line of reasoning (Edelson et al., 2017, p. 936). This phenomenon is especially concerning because the online narrative is translated into a real-life situation, and violence is utilized as a justifiable means of confronting the supposed conspirators (Basit, 2021, p. 4). Also, the online component is essential, as social media platforms are crucial for the formation and facilitation of the theories (Li et al., 2023, pp. 18–19).

In general, three features can be located in most conspiracy theories, as they constitute the source behind unfamiliar events to be evil forces, they understand the political struggle in a good vs. evil dichotomy, and lastly, they firmly believe that mainstream interpretations of current events are a hoax or an attempt to divert public attention away from a secret source of control (Oliver and Wood, 2014, p. 953). The dichotomy between good and bad allows to further establish the belief system and locate the alleged conspirators. This is done through the creation of in- and out-groups, the latter connotated in a negative framing (Basit, 2021, p. 3; Reedy, Gastil and Gabbay, 2013, p. 611). The in-group not only maintains the belief system of the conspiracy theory and supports it by disseminating and potentially searching for their own evidence, but they additionally set up distinctions against the out-group, which consists of either the supposedly blind and ignorant followers of the system, frequently referred to as "sheeple," or even traitors or collaborators (Radomirović Maček and Babič, 2022, p. 37). Regarding the QAnon movement, its conspiratorial thinking includes the superiority of the in-group, alleges an attack on the in-group, and understands this threat as a life-or-death situation, raising concerns (Garry et al., 2021, p. 154).

The difference of conspiracy theories to similar concepts such as paranoid thinking is found in the enemy identification. While conspiracy theories also define an enemy figure, they do so in a precise manner, while paranoia fears enemies in all places (Oliver and Wood, 2014, p. 954).

2.2.2 The Tale of the Rigged Election

In general, election fraud can be understood as secret illegal activities that are employed to shape the election in a predetermined way (Lehoucq, 2003, p. 233). In essence, these actions prevent the enforcement of free, secret, and equal democratic elections (Alvarez, Hall and Hyde, 2008, pp. 1–2). While the precise monitoring and administration of elections is essential for stable democracies, conspiracy theorists have hijacked citizen's concerns and recycled them into their beliefs (Cassidy and Beck, 2022; Center on Extremism, 2022). Despite plenty of repudiations by official sources, investigations, and even probes refuting those claims, they persist in the form of conspiracy theories that defy reality (Cohen, 2021).

Contextually speaking, the election fraud conspiracy theory in itself is not a completely new development, as records show that it has been utilized before the outburst connected to the presidential election of 2020 in the United States and hence is hardly a stroke of genius by Donald Trump (Edelson et al., 2017, p. 934; Fogarty et al., 2015, p. 2). One type of fraud, namely voter fraud, has long driven the landscape of U.S. politics, as Justin Levitt (2007) demonstrated in his research nearly two decades ago. Here, the fraudulent activity is located on the side of those casting their ballots. Other claims that can be grouped in the overall category of election fraud can also involve illegal acts within the election administration (Levitt, 2007, p. 4). The allegations concerning voter fraud can be situated on several different levels, such as double voting, dead voters, use of fraudulent addresses, vote casting by those with a felony conviction, voting of non-citizens, registration fraud or fraud by election officials, and vote buying (Levitt, 2007, pp. 12–22). Furthermore, theories of election fraud also encompass the potential interference of third parties, such as foreign powers (Geller, 2020).

In relation to the persistent notion that Joe Biden is not the legitimate U.S. President, theories on election fraud can be considered a component of the larger picture of a meta-theory, such as "the big lie," which refers to an antisemitic narrative of an even bigger deformation of reality and the truth (Arceneaux and Truex, 2022, p. 3; DiMaggio, 2022, p. 1033; Wolf, 2021). The belief is consistent with the paradigm of a hidden elite, mostly the Democrats or people of Jewish descent, conspiring against the nation's protector, in this case, President Donald Trump (Vrzal, 2020, pp. 50–51).

He and his associates created a climate of mistrust and suspicion months prior to the election (Mallin, 2020). By the time the result of the election was announced, the idea of fraud was already sewn into the conversation. Specific trigger words that have been identified and used by Trump supporters in the 2020 discourse on the election fraud claims are "rigged" or "stolen" (Zadrozny, 2020). In the election fraud conspiracy theory movement, phrases like "stop the steal" have grown popular, referring to the implied fraudulent disposal of Republican ballots (Spring, 2020). The general consensus among those who believe this to be true is that the votes of the 2020 presidential election were improperly counted, ballots were fraudulently dumped, or Dominion voting equipment was tampered with to favor the then-Democratic presidential candidate Joe Biden (Peltz and Riccardi, 2023; Yen, Swenson and Seitz, 2020).

Such assertions have been reproduced in Trump's discourse and repeated by those who support him (Longwell, 2022). One of their primary targets was the impending surge of mail-in voting due to the pandemic. This way of casting the votes was strongly criticized by Trump's aides, including then-Attorney General William Barr, before the election (Cohen, 2020). While these allegations are centered on the fraudulent vote count, a potential exercise of influence through foreign powers in the 2020 election has also been speculated about and spread by members of Trump's inner circle (Mason and Psaledakis, 2020). Even after the election, Trump declined to concede to Joe Biden, tweeted about his self-proclaimed win, and therefore further fueled his followers' belief in a stolen election (AP News, 2020). Up to this day, Donald Trump continues to disseminate his unproven and hence conspiracy-based claims that the election has been stolen from him (Sforza, 2023).

The election fraud theory has also left a mark on the Republican Party. One of the leading voices backing the claims of Donald Trump is Republican Representative Marjorie Taylor Greene, who has shown her support for QAnon in the past (Tulp, 2021). Her rise to political fame is a prime example of how actors in the Republican Party go unscathed and are even able to profit from their unfounded and conspiracy-based beliefs as well as embrace their public connection to QAnon. Greene, while continuously sparking fraud allegations, has been able to secure her re-election in the midterm elections of 2022 (Ferek, 2022; O'kane, 2022). Her entwinement with QAnon is an example of how the movement has been able to connect to the political landscape.

Even two years after the election took place, doubts have kept a solid grounding in the voter base of the then-President (Longwell, 2022), despite the continuous debunking of the allegations (Cohen, 2021). Looking at the data, American voters exhibit a lack of trust in the soundness and validity of the 2020 presidential election outcome and, subsequently, Biden's win (Monmouth University Poll, 2022, p. 3). To this day, three out of ten U.S. Americans believe in the election fraud claims and the supposedly deceitful win of Joe Biden (Mueller, 2023). The continuing skepticism can be interpreted as yet another motive for individuals to promote conspiracy theories about fraud in order to affirm their own confirmation bias and loyalty to Donald Trump as the actual winner (Mayer, 2023). Lastly, this is further complemented by the fact, that the belief in QAnon theories has stayed steadfast in the U.S. in 2021, showing the movement's persistent and expansionist character in a time of circulating doubt (PRRI, 2022, p. 3).

3. Literature Review

While the research of this thesis is focused on the reproduction of the election fraud theory in selected U.S. and German QAnon channels, literature on related concepts is included, as the research objective is multifaceted, complex, and involves several layers. For one, the distributing movement mirrors far-right attitudes, the dissemination process is taking place online, and the election fraud theory is part of the bigger conspiracy nexus. Therefore, research on far-right groups, including QAnon, as well as online dissemination and the role of social media is included in the review.

3.1 Developments in the Far-Right Scene

In order to understand QAnon's messages and its ambitions and dynamic, the broader ideological context and development of far-right groups, narratives, and activity need to be assessed.

The research on the far-right offers a complex picture of the scene as academics point out the increasing challenges posed by the changing structure of right-wing actors and groups, as noted by Azani and colleagues (2020). The researchers map out the far-right scene of today in order to understand its current development and possible future trajectories. Their research draws a picture of the scene's opaque state, the past to present ideological shift, and changes of influential ideas over the past century (Azani et al., 2020, p. 13; pp. 33-34). In light of the rise of digitalization, the authors argue for the power of social media in the spread of far-right ideologies (Azani et al., 2020, p. 16). Furthermore, the role of the conspiracy theory is constituted as an elementary component of the right wing scene and is directly linked to the emergence of QAnon (Azani et al., 2020, pp. 28–29). Moreover, the research points to the direct need for a more in-depth analysis of the content and the dynamics behind it, which is something this thesis aims to complement.

Focusing on Europe, Falzon and Micallef's (2008) research points to a far-right scene that is loosely connected through shared tropes and narratives. While their article is focused on the island of Malta and is limited in its scope of universal applicability due to the qualitative and chronological assessment, it offers a unique insight. It shows how ideas and actors in the scene converge transnationally and gives insights into how selected actors have shaped the scene through internationally and strategically facilitated exchanges (Falzon and Micallef, 2008, pp. 401–404). In several instances, Falzon and Micallef (2008, p. 396, p. 401) are able to locate online forums as the central interaction places for the scene to communicate, disseminate, and connect. Therefore, the research underlines the importance of the internet as a dissemination platform for far-right tropes, such as antisemitism. Through the focus on the content, the study implies that far-right groups should be examined through their narratives and outputs (Falzon and Micallef, 2008, p. 405). This further validates the research of this thesis.

Similar findings regarding the convergence of ideologies and beliefs can be detected in the research conducted by Ong (2020), and Zhang and Davis (2022) respectively. The bodies of work show that far-right ideologies converge between different countries across the West (Zhang and Davis, 2022, p. 125-126), and prior separated belief sets such as QAnon and other anti-government movements come together (Ong, 2020, pp. 3–4).

Summarized, a majority of the research in the far-right realm attests to the significant importance of online and especially social media platforms and paints a picture of an adapting and connecting scene that needs to be further examined to understand its dynamic.

3.2 The Status Quo on QAnon

QAnon presents itself to the academic discourse as a diffuse phenomenon that is embedded in different realms of life, such as politics and society (Garry et al., 2021, p. 203; Holoyda, 2022, pp. 1–2). A majority of the current academic discourse relating to QAnon is focused on the interrelation of COVID-19 and the effect it has on the global rise of the movement (Gallagher, Davey and Hart, 2020; Holnburger, Lamberty and Goedke Tort, 2022; Kużelewska and Tomaszuk, 2022).

The complex structure and dynamic of QAnon are a constant discussion point, also found in the report by Garry et al. (2021). While ambitious in nature, the research is able to pinpoint decisive elements of QAnon, such as the elementary role of Donald Trump as the central figure and protector, as well as QAnon's extensive international dissemination and its threat to democracy (Garry et al., 2021, p. 189; pp. 197-199). Hence, the report assists in stressing the importance for future research as well as understanding QAnon's roots.

The connection to Donald Trump has also been observed in the briefing paper published by Gallagher, Davey and Hart (2020) that provides key insights into the activities and trends in the QAnon movement dating around 2017 to 2020. Through an investigation of QAnon related content on the online platforms of Facebook, Twitter[2], Instagram, and YouTube, it was uncovered that QAnon has been gaining track in the starting months of the pandemic, has been tying itself to the Trump re-election campaign, and has a strong base in the United States with international expansions also to non-English speaking countries such as Germany (Gallagher, Davey and Hart, 2020, pp. 7–9; p. 13). Nevertheless, the research needs to be updated in terms of alternative and non-traditional social media platforms, as the movement has faced massive deplatforming[3] and has thus shifted to new media, which opens an innovative research gap.

Researchers have also looked into the movement's appeal, such as Zuckerman

(2019), who points to the participatory factor, enabled through the use of new media, as a motivation for engagement. What used to be the audience of the theory now actively participates through the dissemination and interpretation of the information

(Zuckerman, 2019). This interactive nature constitutes a significant pull for supporters and disseminators.

Furthermore, the threat level that QAnon potentially poses to society and democracy is strongly thematized in academia. Ebner, Kavanagh and Whitehouse (2022)

quantitively examine the linguistic nature of the written communication of selected

QAnon online group chats through a fusion-based threat model. Based on the harmful content, increased calls for violence, and the derogatory vocabulary, the research favors the hypothesis that QAnon poses a threat to national security, especially so in English-speaking countries (Ebner, Kavanagh and Whitehouse, 2022, p. 73). This sentiment is also shared in Amarasingam and Argentino's article published in 2020, even before the violent outburst at the Capitol. Here they argue that QAnon shows itself to be a growing security threat judging by its violent actions, the accelerated radicalization trajectories of its followers, and the resulting overall violent capacity

(Amarasingam and Argentino, 2020, pp. 41–42). The security challenge posed by QAnon is further emphasized by Dittrich and colleagues (2020). Through extensive monitoring, they discover clear signs of antisemitism in the ideology, explicit calls for violent action, and demonstrate the rapid radicalization among the supporters, which has shown itself in attacks on critical infrastructure (Dittrich et al., 2020, pp. 24–28).

The academic perspective of the threat posed by the movement has also been echoed in law enforcement policies, as the FBI identified QAnon as a domestic security threat even as far back as 2019 (Vanderzielfultz, 2020).

3.3 The Digital Realm

In light of the continuous developments in the far-right scene, social media is essential for far-right and extremist movements such as QAnon. Several authors back this position, as they reckon that online platforms are being used by the extremist and far-right scene to create their own dissemination, exchange, and recruitment platforms (Fielitz, Schwarz and Hitzinger, 2020; Guhl, Ebner and Rau, 2020; Schulze, 2020).

Ebner (2019) connects several far-right attackers to their previous online activities of spreading hate speech and far-right propaganda. She stresses the "hyper-localised [sic] yet internationally standardized and networked approach" (Ebner, 2019) that the actors of the online communities employ. This approach enables the creation of what is essentially their own far-right online ecosystem. The importance of online platforms for the dissemination of far-right ideology is also underscored in the research by Youngblood (2020) centered around the United States. He distinctly points to social media as an important tool for far-right groups' radicalization, on par with physical in-person meetings (Youngblood, 2020, p. 6). The online presence of far-right groups is further enabled through online platform structures. The report by Barret (2022) demonstrates the structural deficiencies of social media platforms like YouTube, Twitter, Meta, or TikTok. It points to their inability or unwillingness to employ their community guidelines to prevent the spread of misinformation (Barrett, 2022, pp. 4–5). In light of these circumstances, the author describes how private citizens as well as political figures have used the momentum to disseminate lies and misinformation surrounding the outcome of the U.S. presidential election of 2020, coded as "ballot trafficking" (Barrett, 2022, pp. 12–13).

When looking into the online realm more in-depth and into its ties to the far-right, the research confirms Telegram's outstanding relevance as a platform. Numerous articles discuss how far-right as well as extremist actors have adapted Telegram as their medium of choice (Gerster et al., 2021; Holnburger, Lamberty and Goedke Tort, 2022; Walther and McCoy, 2021).

Guhl, Ebner and Rau (2020) highlight the importance of Telegram for the German far-right online ecosystem. Through extensive cross-forum research and the combination of several data-generated methods, they created an unprecedented mapping of the German far-right online scene. Their findings emphasize the strong and essential standing of the messaging service in the online discourse of far-right communities in Germany, including the QAnon movement (Guhl, Ebner and Rau, 2020, pp. 8–9; p. 26). The importance of Telegram for far-right actors in Germany is also reflected in the report published by Gerster et al. (2021). Based on their content and link analysis, they are able to demonstrate that Telegram acts as a connector for the redirection of users to other far-right or conspiracy-based channels (Gerster et al., 2021, pp. 29–32). Further, Müller (2022) examined two selected Telegram channels by prominent German far-right and conspiracy figures for their communication strategies. She illustrates how the actors strategically reinterpreted traditional news material to match their own ideology in conjunction with the dissemination of misinformation and conspiracy theories. In their Telegram channels, a formal-looking news-like setting is created in order to relativize hate speech and gather acceptance and legitimacy among the audience and potential newcomers (Müller, 2022, pp. 104–105). Therefore, the messenger app Telegram acts as a vital part of the infrastructure for the German right-wing and conspiracy scene.

When focusing on QAnon's role in online dissemination in Germany, the research by Holnburger, Lamberty and Goedke Tort (2022) presents an established movement that has risen to popularity in the German speaking scene. The analysis shows that QAnon has found its way into the German-speaking discourse on Telegram, resulting in the second biggest hub outside of the U.S (Holnburger, Lamberty and Goedke Tort, 2022, p. 40). Also, the findings confirm that social media, and especially Telegram, are highly relevant for QAnon as a venue for information collection and exchange of conspiracy theories (Holnburger, Lamberty and Goedke Tort, 2022, p. 34). The online realm also spills over into real-life behavior as the belief in QAnon conspiracy theories positively influences the willingness for participation in protests or illegal actions (Holnburger, Lamberty and Goedke Tort, 2022, p. 35). Consequently, the presented thesis complements the work of Holnburger, Lamberty and Goedke Tort as it includes their research as a reference point but intends to go more in depth into the specific theory. Also, Hoseini et al. (2023, pp. 82–83) uncover that the movement not only discussed a multitude of different topics ranging from health to politics in the selected channels, but the content was also primarily toxic, especially that in German, which is pointing to a possible mutation in the movement.

In terms of the United States, the significance of Telegram for far-right actors is mirrored in the work of Walther and McCoy (2021). The authors show how the messenger is primarily used for the dissemination of far-right content and, in the long run, is causing a landscape of disinformation (Walther and McCoy, 2021, p. 110; p. 114). Specifically in the studied channels, QAnon was determined as most popular in the conspiracy theory conversations (Walther and McCoy, 2021, p. 113). Additionally, Puyosa and Ponce de Leon (2022) confirm these findings through their own assessment of Telegram's ecosystem as a hub for QAnon and those outcast by mainstream platforms in the United States. The thriving Telegram presence of QAnon is also mentioned in Argentino and Wildon's work (2021), as they argue that QAnon persists on Telegram even post Trump.

Scholars have also looked at other platforms besides Telegram, such as Twitter or Parler. For Twitter, Dilley, Wełna and Foster (2021, pp. 18–19), found an active engagement of QAnon supporters disseminating their content. Also, Parler, a conservative social media platform, has been used by QAnon for their online community (Bär, Pröllochs and Feuerriegel, 2023, p. 44). Lastly, Facebook has shown itself as a hub of QAnon activity prior to the U.S. election, according to Kim and Kim (2023, p. 15).

Based on the academic overview, an evident gap regarding an up-to-date qualitative assessment of QAnon through the analysis of the election fraud conspiracy theory is evident, as no comparative research objective was detected. The general focus of the academic discourse is set on COVID-specific theories and quantitative methods and hence only looks at the conspiracy theory and the movement superficially. This thesis covers a niche due to the selection and transnational comparison of the content in German and U.S. QAnon channels. Additionally, the inclusion of Telegram as a dissemination platform and, finally, the qualitative analysis add to the innovative approach. As a result, this unique and different point of view complements the research gap and therefore supports the study's legitimacy in examining the online dissemination of the election fraud theory as part of the dynamics of QAnon.

4. Methodology

4.1   Research Design

The thesis employs a qualitative, typical case oriented, inductive research approach that compares two textual bodies. Firstly, employing qualitative research enables the thesis to look at the content more in-depth and interpret hidden phrases that would otherwise remain uncovered (Schreier, 2012, p. 26). Through immersion in the material, knowledge gaps can be bridged (Cleland, 2017, p. 67).

Secondly, to answer the research questions RQ1 and RQ2 most effectively, the thesis focuses on a typical case centered analysis. By focusing on typical cases and therefore purposefully choosing QAnon channels with a geographic affiliation to Germany and the United States, the research design intends to provide comparable and information-rich cases for the qualitative analysis. Selecting typical cases ensures that the election fraud conspiracy, as a central element of QAnon, is actually covered in the channels (Seawright and Gerring, 2008, p. 299). In this setting, the cases are the data corpora consisting of the reproduced election fraud theory by QAnon in the U.S.A and Germany.

Thirdly, the inductive approach helps gather data more easily, which is beneficial due to the complexity of the research subject. Pre-defined research categories and theoretical hypotheses could potentially limit the scope and act as barriers in analyzing highly complex, often hidden, or encrypted content. Given the matter of conspiracy theories, far-right extremist movements, and their often multi-dimensional interactions, inductive reasoning enables the analysis to pick up on these aspects more easily (Guhl, Ebner and Rau, 2020, p. 27). Further, a data-driven approach enables the analysis to be carried out more flexibly and incorporate prior unknown or unsuspected patterns, themes, and the like (Schreier, 2012, pp. 24–25). Inductive reasoning has proven itself valuable in other works related to the research matter, such as in Zhang and Davis (2022) narrative analysis and in Guhl, Ebner and Rau's (2020) report on the far-right online eco system.

Lastly, the transnational comparison of U.S. and German content allows one to draw parallels as well as uncover distinct and potentially varying patterns in the reproduction of the election fraud conspiracy theory (Coccia and Benati, 2018, pp. 2–3). The selected channels and their messages are grouped and analyzed under the corresponding country variable, and their content is compared. Hence, the U.S. channels are understood as a qualitative and typical snapshot of QAnon's narrative in the U.S. and vice versa for the channels in Germany. In line with the inductive design, the data gathered on the micro-level is interpreted and included in the explanatory mechanism design and hypotheses (Coccia and Benati, 2018, p. 2).

4.1.1 Country: U.S.A. and Germany

Both Germany and the United States are chosen as the QAnon relevant countries based on a selection of factors. First, both support the typical case design, as QAnon activity and channels have been uncovered and studied in both countries (Amarasingam and Argentino, 2020; Argentino and Wildon, 2021; Dittrich et al., 2020). While the U.S. is the emerging point and arena of QAnon's involvement in the January 6th insurrection attempt, Germany has established itself as a close runner for QAnon activity outside of the U.S. (Holnburger, Lamberty and Goedke Tort, 2022, p. 40). Therefore, the occurrence of QAnon and consequently the election fraud theory is to be expected in both country settings. Besides, as already touched upon in the introduction, Germany has experienced a violent mass shooting as well as an attempted coup that were both connected to QAnon (Bergengruen, 2022; Huesmann, 2020a; Piper, 2020).

Furthermore, both countries show similar levels of social media use, as the United States is prognosed to have a user base of 72.5 percent, which is topped by Germany as 85.1 percent (Kemp, 2023a, 2023b). Despite the bigger share of the total population using social media in Germany, both countries show very similar levels of internet penetration, with Germany going at 93.1 percent and the U.S. at 91.8 percent (Kemp, 2023a, 2023b). Hence, a similar landscape in terms of the access and potential use of the internet is given.

To add onto the comparability, while QAnon emerged in October 2017 in the U.S. context, the first QAnon related content on social media platforms in Germany was published approximately a month later, in November 2017 (Holnburger, Lamberty and Goedke Tort, 2022, p. 11; p. 15). Therefore, the emergence of QAnon started in the U.S. context, but was quickly picked up in the German conversation.

On a fundamental level, while the U.S. and Germany might differ in realms such as culture or policy, they are both established democracies. Therefore, it is in the very nature of the democratic political system to accept the results of the election to ensure a peaceful transfer of power and continuity of the democracy, a process that is directly challenged by election fraud conspiracy theories. Furthermore, these countries are selected specifically for feasibility considerations. The German and English content can be analyzed instantly without the requirement for translation, which would introduce another barrier between the analysis and the content, potentially leading to distortion effects. Also, the number of countries was limited to two, as this allows for a more in-depth look at the content.

4.1.2 Social Media: Telegram

As the violence is carried out offline, communication and dissemination take place online. As a result, social media platforms are now more than just places for leisure as they serve as connection and dissemination venues. The proliferation of misinformation, theories, and even debunked accusations is considerably easier when looking at the structure of the platforms. The user can also be the producer of the published content, and unverified information can be pushed out mostly anonymously (Buzzetto-More, 2013, p. 67; Del Vicario et al., 2016, p. 554).

In line with the considerations for the typical case, the focus is further sharpened on the free messaging service Telegram as it is a frequented platform of QAnon (Argentino and Wildon, 2021; Holnburger, Lamberty and Goedke Tort, 2022; Hoseini et al., 2023). While Telegram is not a traditional social media site with a feed, it is a mass communication tool following the concept of established platforms (Liedke and Stocking, 2022). In contrast to mainstream giants like Meta or Twitter, it acts as a fringe platform that frequently facilitates the spread of misinformation and propaganda (Molla, 2021; Schulze et al., 2022, p. 1108).

Telegram's initial attraction for far-right extremist groups may be seen in the app's data-privacy friendly settings, as it advertises end-to-end encryption. Also, users can utilize secret chats and self-deleting messages that make potentially incriminating content disappear (Telegram, n.d.b). Telegram rarely moderates, restricts, or deletes content, even going so far as failing to comply with German law (CEP Staff, 2022). Nevertheless, Telegram's newly established standing is a relatively recent momentum, exacerbated by the wave of deplatforming of QAnon content and ultimately Donald Trump by mainstream social media after January 6th, 2021 (Feldstein and Gordon, 2021; Nicas and Frenkel, 2021). Hence, Telegram has gained a notorious standing in scene as the new digital safe place (Greenspan, 2021).

Both in the United States and in Germany, the platform has gained considerable popular support over the past years. In Germany, actors in the far-right and QAnon scene flock to the medium (Müller, 2022, pp. 104–105; Schulze et al., 2022, p. 1113). Telegram has shown by its inaction to comply with the law that it operates globally with a minimal moderation approach (CEP Staff, 2022; Urman and Katz, 2022, pp. 907–908). Also, in the U.S., Telegram has profited from a surge in popularity as Republican voters favor the platform and are more likely to tap into it as a news source than Democratic voters (Liedke and Stocking, 2022). Apart from the bipartisan discourse, Telegram is used in the United States by far-right extremist QAnon supporters (Walther and McCoy, 2021, p. 113). Further, the research by Puyosa and Ponce de Leon (2022) points to a vivid Telegram community in the States. Therefore, in the operational sense, the use of Telegram in German as well as U.S. QAnon groups can be seen as functionally equivalent.

4.2   Channel Collection

The data collection is oriented on the Open Source Intelligence (OSINT) model, which concentrates on the collection, interpretation, and dissemination of publicly available information in light of a specific research question. Furthermore, the collection is undertaken in a passive manner, as there is no direct engagement between the researcher and the community (Gill, 2023). The potential inference on the subjects and lastly on the data is kept to a minimum in order to guarantee research integrity and also respect the privacy of the individuals. For these reasons, the thesis integrates the non-participant observation approach (Williams, 2008, p. 561). Also, as the data is directly taken from the channels, which are primary sources, the reproduction of the election fraud theory is studied as closely as possible.

4.2.1 One-to-many Communication

Given the plethora of communication models that are enabled on Telegram, the "one-to-many communication" is picked, which focuses on the broadcasting of information from one source to many (Jensen and Helles, 2011, p. 522). This form of information transmission can be found in the form of channels. Users can participate in both public and private channels, which are one-sided communication streams that enable only a few administrators to post information, that is rarely monitored or censored, to a large group of individuals (Schulze et al., 2022, p. 1108; Telegram, n.d.b). Here, the channel's admin is able to act under the guise of anonymity as the content is published in the channel's name (Urman and Katz, 2022, pp. 906–907). Actors can leverage this structure by naming channels after the code words used in the QAnon scene. As a result, users can quickly find the output using the platform's global search tool (Urman and Katz, 2022, p. 907).

Consequently, the analysis limits itself to content provided by public channels in line with the OSINT data collection method. Further, it is expected that the one-to-many communication form provides coherent content more likely as solely the administrators post, which is eliminating any potential outside interference. Also, the public channels are easily found, and the content can be looked at by browsing Telegram for information without the need to join, which decreases the barriers for users. In terms of QAnon and the election fraud theory, this means that supporters can seek information via Telegram channels and discover shared themes and communities reproducing their denial, and effort to reinstall Donald Trump as President.

4.2.2 Mixed Platform Approach

In order to locate typical QAnon channels among the masses of outlets on Telegram, a mixed platform approach is adapted. Channels for both the U.S. and Germany are uncovered through an in-platform as well as an out-platform method, as presented by Semenzin and Bainotti (2019).

To collect appropriate channels through the in-platform approach, which is the search on Telegram, a list with relevant key words is constructed based on sources that have defined QAnon-related code words. More details on the sources can be found in the appendices. While one can of course search for "QAnon" through the search bar, the movement has started to adapt code words and phrases in order to stay under the radar and circumvent any potential deplatforming (Morrish, 2020). The collected words are prepared and adjusted for potential variations. Further, different capitalizations on the same phrases are equalized in order to create a ground for matching. Afterwards, the code words are matched across the sources and the top five out of thirty five matches are adapted as those appear in more than, or at least half of the sources. The ranking is supplemented with the background knowledge that has been acquired through the reviewed literature. Based on the work of Holnburger, Lamberty and Goedke Tort (2022, p. 13) the number 17 and the typical QAnon signature "Q" (Gabbatt, 2022), are added to the top five matches. The total matched code words act as supplementary information and can be found in the appendices.

Therefore, the list of relevant terminologies for channel search consists of the following seven items:

1.	wwg1wga	Abbreviation of the popular phrase, used in the movement, "Where we go one, we go all"(Anti Defamation League, n.d.).
2.	great awakening	A moment of collective realization, including the arrest of the Deep State (Dias and Bali, 2021).
3.	qanon	The name of the movement is understood as a baseline search term.
4.	save the children	Misappropriated terminology that alleges a hidden pedophile ring, abusing children (Anti Defamation League, 2020; Roose, 2020)
5.	the storm	Seen as a day of justice against the Deep State, secretly orchestrated by Donald Trump (Anti Defamation League, 2020).
6.	17	Q stands at the 17th place of the alphabet, hence the number is a code word known to insiders (Holnburger, Lamberty and Goedke Tort, 2022, p. 13).

7.	Q	Q is the self-given code name for the forerunner of the QAnon movement and seen as one of the central figures in the scene (Gabbatt, 2022).

Table 1: Items for Channel Search.

For the U.S. search, the items are complemented with "USA", "U.S.", the U.S. flag, and "United States" to tie them in geographically. Unfortunately, academic interest in the German QAnon linguistic side is not as established. Therefore, when collecting German channels the terms 2), 4), and 5) are translated into "Das Große Erwachen", "Rette[t] die Kinder", and "Der Sturm". Additionally, the English items are applied as well for methodological soundness and "Deutschland", "Germany" and the German flag are added to the items for geographic precision.

Undoubtedly, this collection can only provide a snapshot of all the relevant terminologies. The initial list of items was also initially tested to prevent blurred lines with other movements, such as the sovereign citizens, or to avoid irrelevancy. However, based on the consulted literature researching the linguistic features of the movement, the list acts as a sufficient starting point for the in-platform approach. Before the codes are entered into the search bar, a VPN service is set on either the U.S. or Germany in order to mitigate any potential effects that a foreign IP address could have. All the channels, which are uncovered through the search terms, are examined again to confirm the QAnon related content based on the knowledge that has been assembled throughout this project. The background scanning acts as an additional filtering mechanism in order to minimize the mix-up with other conspiracy groups as much as possible. Links to other like-minded but hard-to-reach channels are noted and if fitting integrated, imitating a snowballing sample (Peter et al., 2022, p. 3; Schulze et al., 2022, p. 909; Willaert et al., 2022).

The out-platform approach consults non-Telegram sources, to add supplementary channels to the in-platform search (Semenzin and Bainotti, 2019). Here, academic sources that have identified German or U.S. based QAnon channels on Telegram are included. This further supports the search, as those channels have already been vetted by the researchers and can open up to new communities through the cross-link channel search.

4.2.3 Selection Parameter

After establishing their relation to the QAnon movement, channels are only considered if they fulfill the categories of country affiliation and relevant posting activity during the selected time frame. The country variable is determined by either the German or English language, the discussed national political content of Germany or the United States, the flag of Germany or the U.S., and by skimming through the channels to gain a contextual understanding. This method is oriented on Hoseini et al.'s (2023) tested approach.

The time frame is set as the period of the January 6th hearings, which took place from the 9th of June to the 19th of December 2022, in the U.S. (Healey, 2022; Walsh, 2022). The time frame is chosen as the hearings are a significant event in the 2020 U.S. presidential election reprocessing, took place after the major wave of deplatforming by mainstream social media, were scheduled in advance, held publicly, and lasted for over six months. It is expected that all major actors in the scene and their audiences have had time to relocate to and disseminate on Telegram, which should provide information-rich content. In combination with the time frame, only channels are selected that have been active and posting about the election fraud theory from 9th of June to the 19th of December 2022.

To determine this activity, the U.S. channels are searched for the terms "election fraud" and "voter fraud", while in the German channels the terms "Wahlbetrug" and "Wahlfälschung" are applied. The terms are chosen due to their direct connection to the research subject, to capture the reproduction as closely as possible, and to minimize false positive results. After the first 30 fitting QAnon channels are established for each country, the channel search is completed, and they are examined for the sampling of the content. Establishing in total 60 channels as a base to further dissect in the sampling is considered reasonable in light of the qualitative research design. Also, the limitation might imitate a typical user's online activity while looking for information on the platform more closely.

4.3   Purposeful Sampling

The sampling for the sought after country content is divided into a two-stage process. First, after the initial seed-list of thirty U.S. and thirty German channels has been established, two channels from every country variable are selected based on purposeful sampling to access information-rich content (Palinkas et al., 2015, p. 534). Only two channels are chosen to keep the actual data mass, which is the content relating to election fraud, manageable in line with the qualitative research aim. Furthermore, choosing more than one channel minimizes the chances of an outlier case and creates more stable data. Moreover, the two channels per QAnon country movement are understood as digital mouthpieces for the dissemination of QAnon conspiracy theories and therefore are assumed to perform within the movement's accepted and propagated narrative. The assumption that two channels can be characteristic for the reproduction was further confirmed during the first test skimming, when a majority of cross-channel links were detected, indicating a digital intermingling in the movement. As a result, the limitation to two channels per country ensures a reasonable depth in light of the overflowing availability of information. Finally, the limit functions as randomization, which is meant to prevent selection bias.

To locate each of the two information rich and typical channels out of U.S. and German lists, purposeful sampling, that is tied to pre-set parameters, is applied (Palinkas et al., 2015, p. 539). Upon research, TGStat.com offers itself as one of the few free and comprehensive platforms for Telegram analytics (Urman and Katz, 2022, p. 910). The website's parameter "Average post reach" is chosen to determine the actual readership and hence impact of the channel's own content (Prog.World, n.d.). The subscriber numbers are neglected as they can be distorted due to bots, fake accounts, and as the public publications are visible without a subscription.

Therefore, only channels are considered in the sampling that are listed on TGStat.com. This also acts as a mechanism to prevent selection bias by the researcher, as TGStat.com acts as an external data source. For each month the "Average post reach" parameter is selected and abbreviated as "AV. RE. MM/22". Channels are then ranked based on the highest parameter "AV. RE. 06-12/22", which is the overall averaged data for the reach from June to December 2022. For each country, the two highest ranked channels are then selected only if each channel contains ten or more relevant messages, as defined by the previously determined election fraud theory search items. To confirm the relevancy of the messages, they are skimmed once again for potential false positives while also authenticating the country affiliation and QAnon relation.

The number of ten or more relevant messages per channel secures data availability and research validity, ensures that the channel selection is stable in content, and that the transnational comparison is balanced. In case that the channel with the highest parameter fails to provide the needed number of messages or the country and QAnon affiliation, the next highest channel in "AV. RE. 06-12/22" is selected. This is repeated until two channels are confirmed per country. Hence, in the German case, the highest rated channel is disregarded as less than ten relevant messages were detected.

Afterwards, in the second step, the pertinent messages are located and extracted through the in-channel search function with the already established wordings ("election fraud", "voter fraud"; "Wahlbetrug", "Wahlfälschung"). The U.S. American and German messages, which are either abbreviated by USA or GER, are chronologically grouped together according to their country affiliation, resulting in two data corpora. In the end, the data collection resulted in 92 messages from the U.S. QAnon channels and 119 from the German QAnon channels being included in the content sample.

4.4   Qualitative Analysis

The qualitative analysis corresponds with the nature of the first research question. It is formed on the descriptive level around the qualitative content analysis and comparison and aims to answer how the election fraud theory is reproduced in each QAnon branch. The focus of the analysis is on the user-generated textual content and any non-textual elements, such as videos, audios, or photos, are removed before the analysis. It starts out by creating data-driven concepts and categories through open coding. This helps structure the text for relevant data and to keep oversight on the abundance of primarily obscure information. Hereby, no pre-set models are applied, which goes in line with the inductive research approach. Coding is understood as a tool that enables to analyze data qualitatively (Schreier, 2012, pp. 38–39). Further, the qualitative content analysis offers itself as a tried and tested method that is not only flexible to a variety of data, but also handles the in-depth analysis of the messages' content and allows the researcher to set a specific focus among the mass of variables (Schreier, 2012, pp. 7-8; p. 35). Afterwards, the results of the qualitative content analysis are examined in a transnational comparison.

Firstly, the channels are shortly introduced, and channel-meta data is provided to set the grouped content data in a comprehensive context. Then the messages of each country's textual body are summarized during the analysis process to gain an understanding of the material, familiarize with the meaning of the conspiracy theories, and provide a brief descriptive recollection and starting point. Secondly, open coding is employed to determine reappearing concepts (Schreier, 2012, p. 44). Here the summarization and knowledge established in the first step are used to structure the observations into the baseline of resurfacing concepts (Schreier, 2012, p. 107; Strauss and Corbin, 1998, pp. 101–103). They are uncovered from a mix of strategies such as identifying reappearing themes and abstracting common ideas that resurface in the messages, which are continuously reassessed in the internal documentation process (Charmaz, 2006, pp. 47–48; Chun Tie, Birks and Francis, 2019, pp. 3–5; Strauss and Corbin, 1998, p. 105, pp. 120-121).

As a next step, categories are formed based on the underlining parallels of the concepts. This step helps to group larger segments of the text together (Charmaz, 2006, pp. 57–58). The summarization of the content, the concept generation, and the establishment of and grouping into categories, are carried out for the U.S. as well as German QAnon corpus. The last two phases are repeated several times in order to fully understand their significance and relations (Charmaz, 2006, pp. 57–60). Understandably, as soon as the first messages are analyzed, concepts and categories are established in the researcher's mind. However, both texts are analyzed back-to-back in order to keep the impressions formed during the analysis as unbiased as possible. In a second round of coding, the concepts and categories are reevaluated, adjusted, and potentially even new nuances are uncovered in line with the inductive research design. In general, the reassessment of the concepts and categories is a constant theme throughout the analysis, as it ensures that all the necessary textual elements are processed and considered comparatively to the remaining data, as well as to the developed concepts and categories (Corbin and Strauss, 1990, p. 9, p. 13).

In the second key step, after the content analysis, the QAnon text corpora are transnationally compared in their nuances, concepts, and categories along the dimensions of similarities, differences, and patterns. The dimensions enable a comparative base line structure, which builds the foundation for the construction of the explanatory mechanism.

4.5 Explanatory Mechanism Development

The subsequent part centers on the second research question as it focuses on the contextual interpretation of the formed categories of the two QAnon text materials, and the development of an explanatory mechanism. The mechanism is expected to give insight into the potential causal dynamics behind the variations in the reproduction of the election fraud theory (Bunge, 2004, pp. 195–196). The advantages of explanatory mechanisms as tools for data interpretation and contextualization include their capacity to improve precision, to act as additional reference points for evaluating current theory, and to be empirically applied and falsified (Bastedo, 2012, pp. 344–346). In terms of reach, the explanatory mechanism is located on the middle range level, hence focused on providing a hypothetical explanation for a defined phenomenon (Merton, 1968, pp. 39–40), being QAnon's reproduction of the election fraud theory.

The explanatory mechanism development in this thesis is inspired by and oriented on the concept of the grounded theory method and is conceptualized by Charmaz (2006, p. 187) as "a method of conducting qualitative research that focuses on creating conceptual frameworks or theories through building inductive analysis from the data". Here the researcher is part of the analysis process, it encourages active engagement with the literature, and the approach includes inductive logic, which is fitting with the evolving understanding of research and the objective of this thesis (Charmaz, 2006, pp. 104, 129, 163; Chun Tie, Birks and Francis, 2019, pp. 2–3).

For the purposes of this thesis, grounded theory has been reflected and adjusted to fulfill the research objective of forming an explanatory mechanism based on the variations between the two analyzed data sets. Therefore, the iterative approach has been adapted to one round of data collection in the qualitative content analysis. Given the precisely defined and strict data selection criteria, re-sampling the same channels with the established criteria would likely not yield new data points. Furthermore, given the continuous development of grounded theory in research history, this adjustment is understood as a continuation of the process (Chun Tie, Birks and Francis, 2019, p. 2).

In practice, this means that the explanatory mechanism is constructed based on the uncovered, established, and interpreted differences, similarities, and patterns of the analyzed content of the QAnon corpora (Charmaz, 2006, p. 63). Ultimately, the mechanism offers an explanation for the results of the comparison and thus provides an answer for the second research question. It investigates the dynamics that are assumed to cause variations or similarities between the U.S. and German content (Bastedo, 2012, p. 344). The assumptions for the potential underlaying mechanism are expressed through hypothetical statements, which are continuously reassessed (Corbin and Strauss, 1990, p. 11). Through abstraction, the hypotheses are elevated to a level of general applicability, which ensures their integration into a mechanism and increases their generalizability (Chun Tie, Birks and Francis, 2019, p. 6; Corbin and Strauss, 1990, p. 15).

4.6   Ethical Considerations

Firstly, it is important to practice reflexivity, as subconscious attitudes as well as socialization play a decisive role, even when aiming for utmost objectivity in the research. This study is not placing moral or ethical evaluations on the movement's individual participants. Nevertheless, the author and the thesis clearly distance themselves from all sorts of violence, especially insurrectionist acts as well as calls for violence against politicians and other groups that are in the focus of QAnon. The research material is treated as an insight into an opaque world that is often treated as a conspiracy black box.

Furthermore, to keep the data as objective as possible, no extensive research into private citizens' lives is undertaken. When channel administrators post under their real names, they are public figures who have already been covered by the media and research. Furthermore, no direct interaction with the channels or subscribers is attempted. Finally, for reliability and validity, the channel names are only stated in the appendices, as solely the messages are cited through their country abbreviation and hence are anonymized in the thesis text. While providing the names of far-right outlets to a wider audience can be problematic, the channels were discovered through other academic publications or the public search in Telegram.

4.7 Validity and Reliability

To ensure reliability and validity, the data, research design, and analytical procedure are precisely and transparently documented, and each step is justified for its contribution to the research objective. The documentation is especially crucial to ensure that the channel selection, which is a pre-condition for the data collection, is as transparent as possible. Given the very dynamic online environment, this is the most fitting option to take a snapshot of the QAnon movement. While the described search might present obstacles in finding the exact same channels after the fact, all their necessary information is provided in the appendices. Thereby, the factor of ambiguity was mediated as much as possible while honoring the research objective. In addition, for replicability, the textual content and the generated categories are supplied in the appendices. Furthermore, the typical case design assures that the phenomenon is properly reflected in the chosen cases.

Through the multi-phase and repetitive analysis, intra-coder reliability is affirmed as concepts and categories are continuously re-evaluated in the coding process for their consistency. Also, triangulation was pursued in the areas of the mixed-platform approach, in the data collection, and the multi-step analysis of the retrieved content from multiple channels (Noble and Heale, 2019, p. 67). Overall, the provided measures go in line with the FAIR guiding principles, as the data and research results are "Findable, Accessible, Interoperable, and Reusable" (Wilkinson et al., 2016, p. 5).

5. Empirical Analysis

The U.S. content encompasses 92 messages in total, of which four turned out to be false positives, not offering any insight into the election fraud theory. However, given that this constitutes less than five percent of the U.S. corpora, this is counted as an insignificant proportion. Similarly, the German content consisting of 119 messages also included two false positives, which puts the error rate at about one percent. The error rate is considerably low, which further legitimizes the data collection method. While some of the messages are forwarded from other channels, they are analyzed as typical content, in line with what seems to be self-composed messages, intentionally posted by the channels. Further, it should be noted that while the messages are from mid-to-end of 2022, the sampled channels were still active at the time frame of the data collection. The messages are in full provided in the appendices and are referred to in the thesis by their determined country ID. As some events encompass over five mentions in the message corpus, the maximum amount of IDs is kept to five mentions in the U.S. and German content analysis. This is done in order to keep the text comprehensive, fluid, and understandable for the reader. For complete transparency and reliability, all the established categories and concepts can be found in the appendices with an abundant example section listing the relevant country messages. Direct citations are exempt from this rule.

5.1 QAnon Content USA

The U.S. content is composed of two channels that have roughly over 150 thousand subscribers combined (TGStat.com, 2023b, 2023d). They were both identified as U.S. centric channels due to their use of United States motifs, such as flags in their profile pictures or in their descriptions and were uncovered through the snowball sampling.

The content of the messages reflects full support for the existence of election fraud and treats it as factual knowledge as opposed to a theory. The steadfast assumption that Donald Trump has been defrauded of his supposedly legitimate win is mirrored consistently in the corpus. It is understood as a "massive conspiracy involving many people in and out of government." (USA38; USA85). This negative opinion of the movement towards the current U.S. government is reaffirmed throughout (USA36; USA38).

Furthermore, election fraud as a concept is believed to have taken place long before the 2020 election, as "since AT LEAST the early 2000's our [U.S. American] elections have been manipulated by algorithms & machines" (USA36; no emphasis added). The extensive and longstanding history of election fraud is also projected into the future by the assumption that Donald Trump's opposers will try to "steal the midterm elections again" (USA51). Therefore, those on Trump's side, the self-proclaimed true patriots, are fighting a "two front war (2020 & 2022)" (USA29). This also shows that the concept of election fraud is connected to war analogies throughout the text, further supplemented by statements such as "we [U.S. Americans] have been in a state of war since 9/11…Afghanistan" (USA06), and by comparing it to a "multi-tiered clandestine military operation working in tandem with us [U.S. American] citizens to take back our country [United States]." (USA36) and calling election fraud "an act of war" (USA28).

During the summarization, reappearing actors were uncovered and conceptualized along the lines of savior, ally, enabler, and enemy. These concepts are further grouped into the category of central actors. The central actors shape the election fraud theory and act as agents that are either for or against Donald Trump and his supposed win in the presidential election of 2020. He is the savior in the theory, as "he has a plan to make things right" (USA01) and "ALLOWED them to steal the election which served multiple purposes that will change the world for a very long time" (USA36; no emphasis added) which will make him "the greatest American president, partly because he will have rescued America from economic destruction on three occasions while fighting the Deep State the entire time" (USA01).

Trump's secretive plan is repeated throughout the corpus also in later messages, but never is explicitly specified (USA01; USA36). The second actor concept, ally are those portrayed by their support for Donald Trump in his quest to recover the Presidency. They can be endorsed Republican candidates running for statewide election, such as Kari Lake (USA22; USA26; USA69; USA82) who is described as "the biggest threat to the establishment since President Trump" (USA27) or those working in the legislature, like Republicans questioning the legitimacy of Biden's presidential win (USA12; USA77). Furthermore, allies are found in cooperating law enforcement (USA29; USA30), the Supreme Court through its evaluation of election fraud cases (USA81; USA92), and prominent public figures in Trump's personal circle such as Mike Lindell (USA36; USA59).

Also, the U.S. military is portrayed as a close ally of Donald Trump, as it has and still is allegedly assisting him in his secret plan (USA06, USA10; USA29; USA36). Additionally, the movement sees themselves as participants fighting election fraud on the side of Donald Trump (USA06). Their calls for participation, such as "[y]our vote is your weapon. Use it Tuesday" (USA63) and "[w]e the people are going to get this done" (USA49) are conceptualized as a countermeasure to combat election fraud under the category actions. Therefore, in the bigger context, fighting election fraud by voting for Trump and his candidates is seen as "the last line of defense against communism taking over this country [United States]" (USA62). Further, it is emphasized that the revelation and correction of the U.S. election fraud will have a world-wide impact (USA01; USA23; USA51; USA57; USA78).

On the opposite of the ally is the enabler, which denies the fraud allegation and works in favor of the status quo. Most notably, the media, also called mainstream media, is targeted multiple times over their collaboration of covering up election fraud (USA02; USA06; USA08; USA16; USA41). They are seen as trying to discredit Donald Trump and the public (USA16) as well as only providing one-sided coverage by ignoring all signs of voter fraud (USA64). In this light, the media is described as "corrupt fake news" (USA51). Other enablers are Republican individuals who failed to act against the alleged election fraud (USA19) and disputed Trump's claims (USA68). Furthermore, uncooperative institutions such as the "corrupt" FBI (USA38) and the U.S. Department of Justice (USA01; USA38; USA83; USA85) are understood as enablers through their inaction (USA83; USA85), and "Big Tech" companies from Silicon Valley such as Twitter are described as manipulators of the truth (USA54; USA83; USA84; USA85; USA91).

The last concept is enemy, those believed to be actively undertaking election fraud. The abstract enemy that Trump is fighting is the "Deep State" (USA01; USA36; USA68). In party terms, it is the Democratic Party that actively undertakes fraud (USA04; USA19; USA45; USA51; USA76). In the U.S. data corpus, they constitute the opposite to Trump's alleged rightful claim to the Presidency as they actively engage in illegal ballot trafficking (USA19), manipulation of the election management systems, referred to as "the machines" (USA36), and "committing fraud favoring Democratic candidates" (USA45). Furthermore, left groupings such as "the left" (USA61; USA67) and "Antifa" (USA39; USA60; USA72) are seen as the enemies of Trump and his supporters.

In terms of a foreign enemy, China is understood as the central foreign power influencing the U.S. elections through infiltration (USA29), control of the election management systems (USA46; USA47) and by being directly addressed as "an enemy of America" (USA29). Election fraud is part of the bigger picture "Chinese agenda" (USA36) that is carried out "by CCP agents" (USA46).

The actions undertaken by the enemy, such as election fraud through mail-in voting (USA06; USA08; USA36; USA49), tampering with the election management systems (USA36; USA46; USA47), infiltration (USA29), or the trafficking of ballots (USA06; USA12; USA19; USA45) are therefore conceptualized as deceitful strategies under the category actions.

The general public is also mentioned throughout the text as "normies", which need to be woken up to the reality of fraud (USA20; USA25), and for whom messages need to be made "more digestible" (USA08). Therefore, they do not take an active role in the fight against, or the execution of election fraud and only exist on the sidelines of the conflict.

While the data has been collected in the time frame of the January 6th committee hearings, the content is structured predominantly around the GOP primaries and the following U.S. midterm elections that took place on November 8th 2022 (BBC, 2022; Johnston and Zhang, 2023). A pre- and post-period in terms of the coverage is detected in statements such as "[w]e will continue building the momentum and the wins into November. When the people show up, the cheaters get exposed." (USA26). The anticipation and discussion leading up to the midterm elections start with the topical introduction of the GOP primaries at the end of July 2022 (USA18). Furthermore, election fraud is anticipated to take place (USA21, USA23, USA29) and is later confirmed in the post-election period through describing them as "RIGGED MIDTERM ELECTIONS" (USA72; no emphasis added). Arizona is emphasized as a place of interest and key battleground in the fight against election fraud both in 2020 and the upcoming midterms (USA12; USA21). The states of Pennsylvania (USA12; USA22), Michigan (USA12; USA55), New York (USA70; USA71), and Wisconsin emerge in their connection to U.S. election fraud (USA12; USA 15).

In terms of foreign events, the 2022 presidential Election in Brazil is mentioned as another election fraud related location (USA56; USA57). Here, the military is also an ally and active player tackling election fraud through auditing the votes (USA59) and "the left" is the enemy of allegedly rightfully elected Jair Bolsonaro (USA57). Therefore, the category of strategic location is built, which groups together these places that are in the U.S. and abroad.

All the reappearing events, where election fraud is supposed to have taken place, are categorized as significant event. This encompasses the past U.S. presidential elections of 2016 (USA06; USA36) and 2020 (USA01; USA06; USA10; USA12; USA13), the midterm election of 2022 (USA18; USA21; USA23; USA29; USA72) as well as the presidential election in Brazil in 2022 (USA56; USA57). Ultimately, in the U.S. corpus election fraud is portrayed as the fight of the good side composed of Donald Trump, his supporters and allies against the evil Deep State and its domestic and international actors (USA01; USA26; USA29).

5.2 QAnon Content Germany

The two channels that provide the German QAnon data corpus, represent over 260 thousand subscribers combined (TGStat.com, 2023a, 2023c). Both are listed in the consulted literature as German channels and therefore have been uncovered through the out-platform search. They exhibit either German flags, predominantly mention "Deutschland" (Germany) in their channel as opposed to other German speaking countries such as Austria, Switzerland, and Lichtenstein ("Österreich", "Schweiz", "Lichtenstein") and use standard German, which differentiates to Swiss-German or Austrian-German. Furthermore, the sign "ß" is used throughout both channels, which eliminates Swiss-German and hence reduces the likelihood of Swiss channels (Ha, 2017).

The German QAnon content supports Donald Trump's right to the Presidency of the United States by re-confirming the alleged election fraud during the 2020 U.S. presidential election throughout the entire corpus, such as in the messages of GER18, GER20, GER33, GER36, and GER44. He is understood as the leader working closely with the military while fighting the Cabal (GER64) and the Deep State, which is trying to frame him (GER32). Furthermore, the authors support an antagonistic stance towards the government (GER01). What becomes apparent is that the content consists of a considerable amount of congruous messages, which continuously push the election fraud narrative such as in the messages GER03, GER04, GER05, GER06, and GER07.

The only chance to combat election fraud is through "constitutional principles" ("es muss nach rechtsstaatlichen Grundsätzen gemacht werden") (GER36) and needs to be "proven in front of a court" ("muss vor Gericht bewiesen werden können") (GER36). Meanwhile, Donald Trump is working on his secret plan to retake the Presidency (GER34). In terms of perspective, the content shows nuances of an outsider and observer role by commenting on the U.S. system as "vulnerable" ("vulnerabel") as it can be taken advantage of through ballot trafficking enabled by the pre-longed voting period (GER10). The appeal is directed at the Republicans to cast their vote in the midterm elections in November (GER10). The call for action in combination with the involvement of the courts is conceptualized as countermeasure under the action category.

The German content is also structured through reappearing participating figures for which the category central actor is used. It includes the concepts of savior, ally, enabler, and enemy. The savior concept is fulfilled by Donald Trump, who has been put through a "witchhunt" ("Hexenjagd") (GER32) for years by his opponents and is acting as the "bait" ("Köder") (GER28) to expose the malevolent forces behind the fraud (GER10; GER25; GER32; GER34; GER72). His covert efforts to catch the criminals exercising election fraud are repeated throughout in the messages GER35, GER64, GER65, and GER69. However, while he is the central figure fighting election fraud, the German messages also include a mention of criticism about him (GER104). Here it is described that past election fraud needs to be addressed before preparing for Trump's 2024 Presidential run (GER104). This is seen as a means of holding Trump accountable as the leader (GER104).

In accordance to those assisting Donald Trump, the ally concept includes Kari Lake, the runner up for Arizona Governor (GER13; GER83; GER99; GER100), the Supreme Court through its potential ruling on election fraud (GER45; GER46; GER47; GER48; GER119), and alternative U.S. media that is establishing "the foundation for a new, united offensive against Biden's election fraud" ("Dabei wurde der Grundstein für eine neue, vereinte Offensive gegen Bidens Wahlbetrug gelegt") (GER21; GER22; GER23; GER24).

Other allies are Elon Musk, who is fighting the tech companies and uncovering the truth behind the fraud that allegedly took place within these institutions (GER 60; GER68; GER115), as well as Mike Lindell, who is supposedly monitoring a cyberteam that is uncovering election fraud (GER31; GER92). Also, Jair Bolsonaro is directly described as a "close ally" ("enger Verbündeter") (GER78; GER79; GER80) who has also been defrauded of his win through national election fraud. More abstractly speaking, the patriots as Trump's allies are brought up several times, but with no specification on their individual nature (GER11; GER28; GER32; GER68; GER72). Lastly, the U.S. military is described as a Joker of Trump (GER39), which is part of his secret plan to catch the Deep State actors (GER43; GER64).

On the other hand, the group that is allowing the election fraud to happen consists of the FBI as well as the U.S. Department of Justice as they are called "the bodyguards of the actors of the Deep State" ("Bodyguards der Akteure des tiefen Staates") (GER60). They are both believed to support the execution of election fraud (GER25; GER33; Ger60; GER114). Also, the media, referred to as fake news media ("FakeNewsMedien") (GER32) is conceptualized as collaborating with the enemy (GER05; GER06; GER07; GER08; GER119). Based on their inability to stop election fraud or due to their inactions, they are conceptualized as enabler, under the category of central actors.

The last group that is central to the theory on election fraud in the German content is that of the enemy, which actively engages in the fraud. Firstly, the Deep State, also abbreviated as [DS] in the messages, and its puppeteers ("Marionettenspieler") (GER60) are named multiple times as the leading cause behind the widespread fraud (GER11; GER25; GER32; GER60; GER93). Additionally, "the cabal" ("die Kabale") (GER64; GER65; GER69; GER113), "left establishment" ("linkes Establishment") (GER32) and political families such as the Bidens and Clintons (GER10; GER60) are also mentioned in the enemy context. Also, the Democrats are accused of actively undertaking election fraud in their favor (GER10; GER39; GER40; GER41; GER42). Further, Dominion Voting Systems is described as corrupt (GER49; GER50; GER5; GER74). Tech companies are believed to be owned and operated by the Deep State to fight Donald Trump and disseminate disinformation (GER44; GER60; GER68; GER72). Here, tech companies are used by the enemy as disinformation sources, which evokes the deceitful strategies concept in the actions category. The deceitful strategies concept is complemented by the supposedly ill-intended collection of votes by buses and the criminal prosecution of Trump, which is understood as a diversion (GER10). Also, the messages name foreign influence as an enemy player in the undertaking of election fraud but do not specify further (GER25; GER116; GER119).

While the other actor categories are clearly represented as active participants, the public is only sparsely mentioned. The movement describes the public as in need to be woken up, which means to be made aware of the fraud (GER02; GER11).

Furthermore, when looking at the postings on election fraud, a certain suspense of pre- and post-fraud is detectable. In reappearing messages, the movement discusses that the Democrats and other enemies are planning to interfere in the midterm elections (GER10; GER39; GER40; GER41; GER42; GER45). Another election fraud related event are the presidential elections in Brazil in 2022 (GER67; GER106), which are repeatedly posted about and connected directly to election fraud through mentions of "anomalies" ("Anomalien) (GER63) or saying that "it smells like election fraud" ("Es riecht nach Wahlbetrug") (GER63) and even stating that election fraud has been uncovered (GER78; GER79; GER80; GER102; GER105). The Brazilian election is seen as a globally important event (GER82) in which the Brazilian military is involved (GER84; GER91; GER116).

In combination with the permanent theme of the 2020 presidential election fraud, these contemporary events of 2022, the U.S. midterm elections and the presidential elections in Brazil, are categorized as significant events. They reappear in the data and are central in the continuous reproduction of the election fraud theory. Election fraud in the 2016 U.S. presidential election is not framed as a reappearing theme of significance (GER32).

The category strategic location emerges through the recurrent mentions of election fraud ridden places such as Arizona (GER12; GER13; GER70; GER83; GER88), Michigan (GER04; GER05; GER06), and Brazil (GER63; GER67; GER78, GER79; GER80). Pennsylvania is only mentioned in one message (GER96). Furthermore, there is the repeated association of a war on election fraud (GER11; GER71; GER72), which constitutes it as an effort starting out in the U.S. with global effects (GER02; GER78; GER82). Overall, the German content points to a deeply rooted connection with U.S. political developments.

5.3 Comparison

The previous content analysis laid out the groundwork for the comparison of the analyzed material. In the comparison, the similarities, differences, and patterns are derived from the discussed results.

5.3.1 Similarities

Firstly, the U.S. and German text corpora both state election fraud as a fact as opposed to a theory. The content is in full agreement that the 2020 U.S. presidential election has been stolen from Donald Trump and that malevolent forces behind the theft will do so again (USA38; USA51; USA83; GER33; GER36; GER39). The struggle between those rectifying the election fraud and the conspirators is ongoing and has global ramifications (USA01; USA36; USA51; GER02; GER78; GER82). Furthermore, when looking into the structure, both data sets also match in the content of their last message, which is about the potential termination of the current administration through the Supreme Court of the United States (GER119; USA92). This points to a degree of cohesiveness in the messaging. Furthermore, when looking into the material, both parts of the movement have chosen to repost the same message on the 26th of June 2022 from a shared source, which appeals to the QAnon community to streamline their efforts to find prove for election fraud via mail-in voting (USA08; GER03). Also, both the U.S. and the German channels reproduce Trump's opinions, in which he is directly referencing election fraud (USA83; USA84; USA85; USA87; GER100; GER114; GER117).

Additionally, the election fraud theory is structured with the derived central actor category in both cases. Here, Donald Trump's significant role is also mirrored as the savior. The German and U.S. content center their reproduction around his fundamental role, as someone who is baselessly prosecuted (GER10) and working in the background as a leader with foresight (USA06). Furthermore, other actors can be found as central elements in the theory reproduction, such as allies consisting of the candidate for the Arizona Governor's office Kari Lake (USA22; GER10), Mike Lindell (USA36; GER31), the U.S. military (US06; GER39), the U.S. Supreme Court (USA81; GER45), and the patriots (USA06; GER68). The shared concept of enabler is composed of the media (USA02; GER05), the FBI, and the U.S. Department of Justice (USA83; GER25). The messages identify the Deep State (USA01; GER11), the Democrats (USA04; GER10), and the left (USA61; GER32) in its various forms as the enemies to their cause of making the elections 'save' again and helping Trump become the rightful head of state. Also, in both cases, the public only plays a minor and passive role (USA08; USA20; USA25; GER02; GER11)

They react to the same election events while paying little attention to the January 6th investigation. The QAnon outlets anticipated the election fraud significant event such as the midterm elections (USA18; USA26; USA73; GEr10; GER39; GER84) as well as the Brazilian elections (USA56; USA57; GER63; GER82). In addition, these findings also confirm that QAnon U.S. and Germany focus on the U.S. and Brazil as the strategic location of election fraud. Both strategic location and significant event are majorly U.S. related, with the exception of the selected coverage on Brazil.

Overall, the content in German and in U.S. QAnon stayed comparatively constant in its persistent notion of fraud, and in unison when discussing the elections. In terms of cited sources, the German as well as the U.S. messages reproduce content from U.S. sources, such as Trump's Truth Social Channel (USA83; GER100) and The Gateway Pundit (USA15; GER70), which is a far-right U.S. based extremism disinformation site promoting the election fraud theory (Eisler, 2021).

5.3.2 Differences

Nevertheless, while there is an overall consensus on the reproduction of the election fraud theory, some more nuanced differences are detectable. Primarily, the German content stands out through its inclusion of a Trump critical message (GER104), especially since the message originates from another U.S. based QAnon account and hence would also be available to the selected U.S. channels. Furthermore, the U.S. content consists of more individual messages. While repetitive in nature, each seems to be an individual output. On the other side, in the German content, messages were sometimes reposted, even a month after the original release, as observed in the messages GER64 and GER113. Additionally, the German messages do not conceptualize a specific country as the foreign influence. Also, when discussing the deceitful strategies, the U.S. authors describe the fraudulent activities more in detail, such as ballot trafficking by the Democrats during the vote counting (USA19), whereas the German side stays on a superficial level, alleging a potential, but not specified, steal of ballots (GER10).

In a more in-depth comparison, the German corpus interprets its own standing in the election fraud situation from a different angle than the U.S. content. While they both conceptualize the countermeasure, the U.S. content is more adamant on the calls to action (USA49; USA62; USA63) and the direct involvement of the audience, whereas the German messages take an observer's perspective (GER10). The German side comments on the U.S. election system and creates distance to the on-the-ground activists by stating that the Republicans have to vote (GER10). While the core category of central actors as well as the included concepts are employed identically to illustrate the global fight of good versus bad, the specific concept affiliations differ. The U.S. content includes sceptic Republicans (USA12) and law enforcement agents as the ally (USA30), while the German messages name Jair Bolsonaro as a close ally (GER78) and signal the important role of U.S. alternative media (GER21). Also, the enabler and enemy slightly vary, as QAnon in Germany actively includes the cabal as an enemy (GER64), while the U.S. branch insists on China's deep influence (USA29).

5.3.3 Patterns

Consequently, both the differences and similarities point to a shared pattern of structuring the election fraud theory through the central actors, around a significant event, carried out through actions at a strategic location, and as a U.S. centric but globally important affair. These categories act as structuring elements that enable the replication of the theory in a storytelling way and to a high degree of similarity in the U.S. and German movements. Notably, the selected examples, themes, and elements manifest election fraud as a fact and illustrate Donald Trump as the cheated savior. Adhering to and insisting on this structure proves to facilitate clear, compatible, and repeated messaging between the branches and ensures a streamlined and consistent narrative in QAnon. Lastly, through the repetitive structure of the central actor category, the in- and out-groups can be distinguished.

6. Explanatory Mechanism

The following chapter is structured into subchapters of which the first introduces the three hypotheses that construct the explanatory mechanism. The first hypothesis creates the foundation that forms the more nuanced hypotheses two and three. Furthermore, their potential integration into the literature and theory is established, and lastly, potentially alternative explanations are evaluated.

6.1 Explanatory Mechanism Construction

The results of the qualitative analysis show that the election fraud theory is reproduced very similarly in the U.S. and German channels. Both sides construct their reality through the categories of shared actors, actions, significant events, and strategic locations. The two QAnon country branches share the same baseline message: election fraud is a real and imminent threat, through which Donald Trump and his allies have been cheated by their opposers. One and a half years after the deadly storm on the Capitol and even two years after the initial U.S. election, the movement, even at the end of 2022, continued to strictly adhere to its preset theory. During the analyzed time frame, the theory was also applied to the U.S. midterms and Brazilian presidential elections that were taking place in that period, which shows the adaptability of the conspiracy theory. While it may not seem surprising that both QAnon sections see Donald Trump as their main actor and savior, it does point to a centralization of the movement around the impeached former U.S. President and the United States.

Ultimately, when examining the German content, what is not discussed stands out, namely the lack of specific actors or incidents of election fraud in Germany. Even the attempted coup by a German QAnon inspired group, that was uncovered by German law enforcement in December 2022 (Bergengruen, 2022), was not mentioned. Therefore, the proposed hypothesis bases itself on the importance and overpowering nature of a shared ideology over individual country backgrounds, showing that the movement has a high level of transnational alignment. Here, it is expected that shared ideology provides an overarching framework of common ideas, norms, and values for the content. The dissemination of this ideological baseline, which constructs the transnational congruence, is presumed to be facilitated by international communication platforms such as Telegram. Consequently, the assumption is that based on QAnon's shared ideology, the content is adapted transnationally and overrides national boundaries. The transnational nature of QAnon forms the first baseline hypothesis that later, among the other two, is integrated into the final mechanism.

> H1: "If QAnon has multiple global branches, they are more likely to reproduce convergent content rather than centering on country-specific topics."

Furthermore, the direction of influence has to be established. The reproduction of the election fraud theory in the German material has a strong U.S. focus and only strays out of these geographic bounds when discussing the presidential elections in Brazil. However, this non-U.S. event is not a German outlier, as it is also mirrored in the U.S. material. Why was the German content influenced by U.S.-based themes, such as the midterm elections in 2022? Why was there no influence detected the other way around, such as German themes in U.S. outlets? The potential of such German influence is not entirely improbable, as the German QAnon community has amassed a significant following outside of the U.S. in the non-English speaking realm and hence can be seen as a player of international weight (Bennhold, 2020; Holnburger, Lamberty and Goedke Tort, 2022, p. 40). Further, rather than adopting well-known, Germany-centered and regional far-right narratives, the German QAnon players have integrated U.S. actors, themes, and even translated messages from U.S. American sources in order to construct the election fraud conspiracy theory in their own channels. Also, the German messages reference U.S. sources and post direct translations of original U.S. content. While this congruence might be attributed to the initial start of QAnon in the U.S., the U.S. centric messaging has stayed consistent even years later in the German channels.

One can trace slight pointers to potential country specific influences, as China as the enemy is also outside of the theories understood as the top competitor for global influence from the U.S.' perspective (Cheathman, 2023; Kine, 2022). However, the differences are minor when considering the overall consistency of the reproduced election fraud theory in all four of the channels.

With this background, it becomes clear how decisive the narrative dominance of United States' QAnon has translated itself into the international discourse. It is therefore suggested that the reproduction of the election fraud theory and, more broadly, issues in general, are shaped by the centrality and dominance of U.S. content in the QAnon movement. This assumption is supported by the previous hypothesis that states the importance of shared ideology as a transnationalizing element. The movement's U.S. focus in combination with the importance of shared ideology, indicate that the effects of the country in which the non-U.S. group is based, are overridden. This means, that channels in different countries are expected to post similar content consistent with QAnon's U.S.-centric base.

> H2: "If QAnon branches are operating outside of the United States, they will still reproduce U.S.-centric content due to its dominance within the movement."

The U.S. channels are not only the dominant force behind topic selection but are also situated close to the original U.S. sources and the center of the dissemination process. Those that are part of the movement and located outside the U.S., reproduce the core content, such as Trump's role as a savior or the significant events and strategic locations, in consistency with the U.S. base. One may see minor content discrepancies when these concepts spread around the QAnon network as a result of translation challenges, technological environments, or similar filtering effects.

Therefore, the observed nuances and variations in the content can be explained through these content diffusion processes and their effects on homogeneity.

> H3: "If there are variations in the content of different international QAnon branches, these can be linked to the movement's process of spreading information transnationally from the core (U.S.) to the periphery (outside the United States)."

Consequently the explanatory mechanism is constructed as follows:

> The transnational similarity in content is facilitated by the overriding power of shared ideology over country association (H1). As shared ideology is an elementary driver, the general international predominance of the U.S. is amplified within the movement, which stipulates the replication of U.S. content across non-U.S. QAnon branches (H2). The existence of variations in the content of different QAnon national branches can be attributed to the process of global dissemination from the core (the United States) to the periphery (outside the United States) (H3).

Overall, this mechanism implies that the foundational determinant of shared ideology and the U.S.'s key and central position within QAnon influence the content adoption by other international branches, leading to a consistent and corresponding narrative across the globe. Ultimately. this means that QAnon presents itself as a globalized, synchronized, and U.S. centric movement.

6.2 Place in Literature

The hypotheses and explanatory mechanism are contextualized in order to understand their validity and applicability in the academic discourse and state-of-the-art research.

The observation of transnationally shared ideology dominating over country origin is mirrored in literature through the theoretical concepts of transnational social movements and transnationalisation. In a world of maximum connectivity, the process of transnationalism encapsulates the transboundary relations between social movements that are overshadowing the limitations of the nation state (Huff, 2014). In relation to QAnon, the research by Jones (2023) reflects the transnational nature of QAnon in Australia. Zhang and Davis (2022, p. 132) use the terminology of "transnationalisation" when describing the overarching topics that are reflected in the international posts of Australian and British far-right groups. Their work centers on the far-right international realm and provides further confirmation of the assumption that transnationally common themes act as the baseline of international movements (Zhang and Davis, 2022).

Furthermore, transnationalism as a theoretical concept has been gaining traction in the realm of social sciences, as described by Froio and Ganesh (2019, p. 516). Transnationalist features of the far-right are also reflected in Donahue's (2021) work as well as in the report published by Ibsen and colleagues (2020, p. 10) which recognizes far-right movements as united by the shared narratives. Additionally, the transnational convergence in the narratives of international far-right movements has been detected by Hogan and Haltinner (2015). This adaptation has been conceptualized as the "transnational right-wing populist 'play-book'" (Hogan and Haltinner, 2015, p. 534). Also, the importance of the internet and social media for this transnationalisation has been discussed in-depth in the literature review and demonstrated through authors such as Youngblood (2020), Guhl, Ebner and Rau (2020), and Ebner (2019). Hence, the academically established notion of transnationalism finds ample applicability in light of QAnon's international character and content.

The U.S. centrality and dominance in the topic selection can be placed in the broader theory of soft power and cultural dominance as championed by Nye (1990). While globalization has changed the landscape of the international structure and facilitated the transformation of the global system, influence can still be exercised through cultural predominance and narratives (Roselle, Miskimmon and O'Loughlin, 2014, pp. 76–77). At least in the Western context, the U.S.' influence through its superpower status can be traced in media, arts, and politics and consequently also reflects itself in the produced narratives (Broersma, 2019, p. 416; Winecoff, 2020, pp. 241–243). Donald Trump's importance as an influential U.S. actor and opinion maker in the far-right scene is also identified by Donahue (2021, p. 344). In the context of QAnon, the U.S. plays a vital role in influencing the movement's content due to its status as a worldwide cultural superpower, continuously exerting its soft power.

Lastly, the core-periphery paradigm is also conceptualized in other works that examine movements, social networks, political structures, and their characteristics (Borgatti and Everett, 2000; Campos and Macchiarelli, 2021; Gallagher, Young and Welles, 2021; Misztal, 1988). Detrich (2018, pp. 543–544) confirms the observed and hypothesized assumption of a structured and multilevel dissemination process. Furthermore, the process of retelling content from the core to the periphery is expected to create variations, as described in the theory of narrative (Coste, 2017, p. 12). Therefore, the observed variation in the QAnon content fits in with the theoretically well-established concepts of core-periphery and content transmission process, which can cause variations.

6.3 Alternative Explanations

While the hypotheses and the constructed explanatory mechanism have considerable foundations in the presented literature, alternative explanations for the similarity in the analyzed content have to be considered as well.

Firstly, it could be assumed that the resemblance in U.S. and German QAnon content is just a coincidence. This could be due to the selected channels not being representative of the overall movement in the United States, Germany, and internationally. However, given that a considerable number of messages was either translated from other channels or forwarded domestically and internationally, this assumption is highly unlikely given the presented interconnectedness. Although the forwarded messages were not specifically highlighted during the analysis as they were seamlessly integrated into the overall channel content, it is essential to emphasize their presence in light of this potential alternative explanation. On Telegram, cross-channel links are an established method of community connection and expansion (Puyosa and Ponce de Leon, 2022). Given the predominant congruence of the election fraud theory within the four country channels, the chance of a coincidental similarity presents itself as rather implausible. Further, if variations are detected in different QAnon channels in the German or U.S. discourse or in other country branches, then those should be understood as outliers, which have been explicitly averted through the in-depth data selection with keyword search and multi-method channel selection. The selection criteria also ensure that representative messages were selected, which further challenges the coincidence objection.

Secondly, an alternative explanation for the similarity in content could be that it is only the case in the election fraud theory and therefore is not representative of the remaining and general content. While this is not completely disputable, due to the limited focus of this specific analysis, there are profound doubts that arise. Election fraud and the theories and conspiracies in connection with it are part of a bigger conspiracy that reflects the fight of good versus bad, Donald Trump versus the Deep State (Argentino and Amarasingam, 2020). Therefore, it can be justly assumed that such a central topic, which reflects a lot of the central themes, as the cabal, the grand conspiracy against the people, and the control of the Deep State (Collins, 2020), will not be significantly different portrayed in comparison to the remaining theories. Moreover, due to the central element of the election and the political figures in the movement, it should be seen as a representation of the conspiracy corpus and as part of the bigger consensus that is cultivated in QAnon.

Lastly, it is important to address the assumption that the country origin is the determining factor for individual QAnon content selection and that, therefore, this analysis is not a representative example of how QAnon adopts their content internationally. Similarly to the previous point, the centrality of the election fraud theory needs to be emphasized. Also, over a six-month period, the German content notably failed to mention any German-specific elements such as German elites, German Deep State collaborators, or even question the German General elections that had taken place a year prior in 2021 (Märländer, 2021). These observations indicate an intentional decision to focus on U.S. centric content and events, which differentiates QAnon as an internationally synchronized movement from other conspiracy movements, with which they might share some ideological elements, such as distrust towards authority. Previous studies, such as those by Jones (2023), Zhang and Davis

(2022), and Hogan and Haltinner (2015) confirm the presence and potency of transnational influence. As a result, this study demonstrates in consonance with other research that the movement's transnational coherence is driven by deliberate choices rather than being influenced only by the country of origin or even coincidence.

7. Limitations

There are a few limitations to the study that should be mentioned. To begin, due to the dynamic nature of the online world, which includes possible deletions or renaming, some channels were not detectable utilizing the out-platform technique. Looking back at previous events from today's perspective, the online world has likewise advanced. A true snapshot of all the channels at that time would have only been possible through continuous monitoring of channels for potential future research purposes, which overtakes the scope of this thesis and can also pose ethical dilemmas such as data privacy protection. Also, messages might have been deleted before the research of this thesis. However, this interference in the data is assumed to be at a minimum level, as only administrators are enabled to delete and have little incentive to do so under the guise of anonymity and in front of an affirmative audience (Telegram, n.d.a).

Second, due to Telegram's opaque structure and limited open analytical capabilities for researchers, the accessed content and parameters had to be reflected in light of their relevance and genuineness. In order to establish objective parameters for channel selection, the average reach of the analyzed months (AV. RE. 06-12/22), calculated from June to December 2022, was employed. However, the data for these rankings was taken from only one source, TGstat.com, due to a shortage of consistent and available data in this realm. Also, publicly accessible data can run the risk of not fully capturing the internal ideological structure of the members (Blee, 2007, pp. 120–121).

Thirdly, to ensure manageability and depth, the study employs a qualitative design and examines two countries, restricting the scope of generalization. To reflect the phenomenon most accurately, this study focuses on typical cases. However, both the U.S. and Germany only represent a limited and Western perspective of the movement. Hence, results have to be interpreted and analyzed in light of this geographical and cultural limitation. Integrating additional and potentially non-Western countries could have broadened the scope of the research but might have introduced further unaccounted-for variables and translation barriers. Furthermore, the restriction parameters of two channels per country, and the limitation of a total of four channel search keywords have potentially led to the omission of data.

Nevertheless, these restrictions were undertaken as this approach captures the phenomenon most closely and therefore adds to the validity of the thesis. While a random sample might have eliminated the potential sampling bias, it could have selected irrelevant content that provides no insight. It should be noted that all steps, such as the several levels of selection, the channel discovery, and the content collection, were taken into consideration for their contribution for the research and always profoundly reflected for their benefits and costs. As QAnon is a semi-hidden movement that operates outside of the mainstream and general consensus, researchers need to establish these purposeful selection criteria in order to gain access to hidden and meaningful content.

Another potential limitation is the sole focus on social media, especially Telegram. Sampling other platforms could have produced relevant insights. Nevertheless, Telegram's structure of openly accessible channels allows for the transparent and easily available collection of primary data without any interaction with the community. Furthermore, the choice to focus on social media is justified as the movement operates primarily in these structures (Fielitz, Schwarz and Hitzinger, 2020; Greenspan, 2021). Relying on other resources as the designated analysis material would have introduced the obstacle of depending on secondary sources.

Lastly, results should also be viewed critically in terms of their explanatory value and contribution. Given the qualitative research design and the novelty of QAnon, they are limited in generalizability. Yet, they provide justification to examine the transnational connections more closely and therefore gain a more profound understanding of the adapting movement, also in relation to potential future violence supported by QAnon. As for the explanatory mechanism and generated hypotheses, it can be argued that they only present a limited range of explanation. Here, it should be stated that this research aims to act as a starting point through its inductive and qualitative design. It establishes a comprehensive snapshot of the phenomenon, which builds a solid foundation that can be further built upon.

8. Concluding Remarks: QAnon's Global Reach

The research has shown that QAnon is a globally connected and U.S. centric movement, with a profound attachment to Donald Trump as their savior. Therefore, the election fraud conspiracy theory was reproduced in a similar manner both in the U.S. and Germany. Both overlapped greatly in their content, such as the central actors, and focused on the same events. More so, the German content does not reference Germany or German actors in the election fraud theory. The shared ideology and the U.S. centrality in the movement have helped create a coherent and synchronized international structure in QAnon. Therefore, the reproduction of the election fraud theory is centered on the U.S. movement's discourse and is unanimously understood as factual evidence. Unobstructed by national influences, borders, or even language differences, the movement is able to adapt and overcome established and factual knowledge while attracting new supporters (Dover, 2023).

Also, in reflection of the structure through which the election fraud theory was reproduced, it confirms the classification as a conspiracy theory as described in the beginning of this thesis. As shown in the analysis, QAnon includes the fight of good versus bad, the collaborative media, and passive public, and has a clearly defined enemy in the Deep State and its agents.

In terms of its implications, the persistence of the election fraud theory is highly troubling. While the content has been sampled from the second half of 2022, the aftermath of the election fraud theory in the United States is far from over. At the time of publication of this research, the investigation into Donald Trump's involvement in trying to overturn the 2020 presidential election, is still undergoing (Honderich, 2023). Even in the light of criminal prosecutions, public hearings, and a legitimately elected administration, QAnon was able to create a disconnected reality. Also, by recycling old antisemitic tropes and integrating established far-right narratives, QAnon's content is a clear warning sign for the continuous, very present, and toxic propagation of deeply rooted and dangerous far-right images. This insight is highly relevant when monitoring QAnon as a far-right extremist threat, as it means that national law enforcement, such as in Germany, needs to take U.S. developments into account when trying to prevent national incidents.

Furthermore, while the disseminators might hide in anonymity, through the collective call for actions and the progressing radicalization, activities are bound to be carried out in the real world. Law enforcement was unprepared for the QAnon inspired shooting in Hanau (Huesmann, 2020a; Knight, 2022) and a year later in front of the Capitol on January 6th (Woodruff Swan and Lippman, 2021). Based on the movement's history of violence and attempted insurrections, agencies cannot lose sight of it. While information on QAnon has been generated and provided valuable insights, it is crucial to continue monitoring, so that in the event of violence, the movement cannot hide behind the odd individual case, as often done in the far-right extremist scene (Pfahl-Traughber, 2020). Moreover, the potential merger with other actors such as the sovereign citizens movement or Querdenken has to be studied, as this would constitute a new stream of members.

The insights of this thesis should be understood as a cornerstone of the larger foundation of research on QAnon. For future academic studies, the movement's potential adaptation of new or mutated conspiracy theories should be reflected. Further, by choosing additional countries, the academic corpus can also be expanded in scope and the strength of shared ideology can be reviewed. What happens to QAnon when Donald Trump leaves the political arena, or a new savior emerges?

How will democracies shoulder these developments in the future?

ID	Content
USA01	I read President Trump's 12 page response to the January 6th investigation. The objective of the letter is to point out the responsibilities and opportunities each branch of government had to correct the stolen 2020 election and their refusal to make it right. Trump concludes with an assessment that the country is going to hell and no one in government seems to care. He says the DC swamp is doing everything they can to stop him but he will not be stopped. Clearly, he has a plan to make things right. His plan has not been revealed, nevertheless, he intends to save America. If state executives, state legislatures, the U.S. congress, the Department of Justice, and the federal courts refuse to fix the 2020 election, that leaves Trump and his allies to do it themselves. He's making the case for a reversal of the election results by a method most people have never considered. Trump is a man of unmatched vision and ambition. His greatest achievement is rebuilding the American economy twice--first in the wake of Obama's economic failures and then after covid lockdowns. He is going to rebuild the economy one more time. Trump is building a legacy. He'll go down in history as the greatest American president, partly because he will have rescued America from economic destruction on three occasions while fighting the Deep State the entire time. America (And The World) Will be Saved. This is a great letter to show your Trump supporting friends/Fam, who are on he fence about election fraud and/or the J6 sham…. So many facts and resources. The best part of this letter was the very last paragraph. 🔥 🔥 🔥 🔥 🔥 Sounds like POTUS is saying nothing can stop what is coming! USA06	Game Theory: MJ's Opinion Synopsis Donald Trump won the 2016 election. How, if elections are rigged? The short answer…. A quiet military coup happened. The military relied on #POTUS to win BIG to beat the algorithms, and win BIG he did. Ballot trafficking was no where near the level of today… #36 If Trump failed, if we failed, and HRC assumed control, we as Patriots were prepared to do the unthinkable (this was leaked internally and kept the delegate recount scam and BO from declaring fraud). How do you tell people about the level of corruption, deceit, treason, and lies that exists? A Q Clearance Patriot providing crumbs and asking questions… Look at us today. How far have we come? The movement is massive. A color revolution, + Operation Mockingbird on steroids was activated once POTUS was elected. Q says we know the playbook… that's because these are CIA tactics that have been used in other countries for decades to overthrow governments. 2020 elections approach— how do we defeat Trump? The Dominion Machines, although proven hackable and still need to go, are in WH control. Thank the NSA for that. If they can no longer cheat electronically, How can they cheat? Vote by mail.

What "event" was necessary to provide cover for mail in ballots?

The Plandemic.

POTUS knew about the Plandemic and He called out exactly how they would cheat long before.

POTUS tested the waters prior to operation Warpspeed being announced…. being defiant against wearing masks and the seriousness of the Plandemic.

Operation Mockingbird zeroed in on deaths and scary fear porn, 24/7 non stop coverage…. Trump suffered in the polls.

Many Americans were brainwashed scared… if anyone will be honest, I'm sure a lot of you were too…
Mockingbird media projected we can't go back to normal until we have a vaccine. Many Years!!!!

Plan B.

May 2020, Operation Warpspeed was announced.

Warpspeed was to counter their agenda, and protect against an economic collapse and societal breakdown, while restoring public confidence that there was hope on the horizon.

No vaccines= We would be locked down for a very long time. Very Scared people.

Vaccines= Deeply Exposed the cabal agenda, & temporarily saved the economy. People felt safe.

Vaccines created and economy saved, all prior to POTUS "exit"

POTUS faces a decision:

The MSM projected many many months before that Trump would not accept the election results and leave the White House… the military would need to drag him out.

1. POTUS stays, he's proclaimed a tyrant and a civil war would ensue. Left possibly calls on UN to intervene.

2. POTUS leaves, but with enough power to keep us afloat.

POTUS left… but with what kind of power?

To determine that, Ask what has transpired…

- We've been in a state of war since 9/11…Afghanistan
- A biological attack (C-19) came from another country.
- All 50 states, first time in history, under a disaster declaration
- A digital Pearl Harbor occurred, foreign countries involved in stealing our elections..

All above equates to wartime powers of the president, while utilizing nefarious EO's of past presidents… there is quite a few… like BO's Internet Kill Switch.

EO 13848, citing above references, because there was foreign interference in our elections, are how, if we haven't already, will take back all US based foreign owned assets— food, agriculture… etc….
Coincidence even Joe Biden Extended it again?

What now?
You have to Show the people.
Controlled demolition of the old guard and old structures of control, financial systems etc.…

It's time to wake up America.
Everything they want to achieve is being blatantly placed in front of you and it's too obvious not to notice.

- Gun grabs agendas through FF shootings
- A spiraling economy and Inflation that's affecting everyone's wallet
- Never ending Plandemic, hypocrisy, & lies
- The Tracking, controlling, and the digitalization of your life into a QRcode to be controlled by a radicalized government
- The left ideology of socialism and Communism

USA07	Boom baby boom! Andrew Gillum, the 2018 Democratic nominee for Florida governor, has been indicted on 21 federal charges including conspiracy and wire fraud for funneling donations through third parties back to himself for personal use, prosecutors said Wednesday.

USA08	Alright, this is going to be a very uncomfortable conversation for many, but someone needs to step up. This is a topic I never directly talk about, but today we are going to talk about it. We are going to have an adult conversation about Q. More specifically, the people who talk about Q, the Anons. To preface my statements, those that have known me, know I go back to the beginning. I've been following the drops since Halloween, 2017. I used to be popular anon on Twitter under many different names, I've read every drop a plethora of times. I've followed the entire time. I'm an Anon, I just intentionally avoid directly talk about Q to create a message more digestible for normies, and all those who are turned off by the Q community. So Q is back to posting after zero comms for 18 months, which has obviously sparked a lot of excitement in the Anon community. But with this excitement, comes a slew of new terrible decodes/interpretations and egregious stretches to make connections that simply are not there. Folks, you need to recognize that it's different this time around. We have built a big-ass audience over the past 18 months. We are literally the news now. I'm breaking massive stories like Russia targeting US biolabs, while the media are praising nazis and pushing fake war propaganda. Big name guests like Gregg Phillips, Kash Patel, Dinesh D'Souza, Trump's Lawyer Peter Ticktin, etc., have been coming onto Anon podcasts and shows. A lot of people come to Anons for their news now, because the media have completely fallen off of a cliff and we are providing the ACTUAL NEWS. Not with drops and decodes, but with real-world proofs like Biden tanking the country, gas prices, election fraud via mail-in voting, C19 came from Wuhan lab, Durham, Russia accusing the DNC of crimes against humanity via bio-genocide, Hunter Biden laptop and dirty dealings in Ukraine, Epstein. All these real-world proofs have drawn people to us, because we were right about all this stuff and the MSM was dead wrong. Now that Q is back, this actual news and proof will be muddied with popular Anons in the community making asinine "decodes" like finding 765 spaces between the words in a random drop, dividing it by 17 and it equals 45, and that somehow means that all of Q is legitimate. Stuff like this may be fun for people, but it doesn't help the movement in any way. All of the people who are going to buy into these ridiculous non-connections are people who already follow Q. You're not waking anyone up. You're not helping. But here's how it hurts the movement: -it gives critics low hanging fruit to discredit -it deters normies because it doesn't make any sense or prove anything -it lessens the impact of real proofs via association I was inspired by a Truth from @IET17 and he's 100% correct. "The time for obscure, reaching, and convoluted proofs is over." I couldn't agree more. Clearly I don't speak for everyone, but I highly suggest the entire Anon community do a serious self-evaluation of themselves, as well of what content they deem viable to post/promote. Too many in the community forget what the main objective of the mission is. The mission is NOT to see who can get the most followers or get 10k likes on a funny meme. The mission is to wake up normies to assist white hats with global acceptance for high profile arrests and crimes against humanity. That's your one job, and it's LONG overdue for everyone start taking it more seriously. Shape your message to reach a broader audience instead of catering to the same echo chamber. Stop trying to legitimize Q with decodes, and let the real-world proofs come in real time. We've seen a million of them. We don't have to make any up. Use discernment before posting something. If you have to think if it's a proof, it's not a proof. There should be ZERO stretching involved. Stop trying to find 17s in everything. Just talk about the content of the drops, and how they relate to the real-world happenings. THATS IT.
USA09	As I've said many many times…. #Placeholder 2023 Just In: In an election case out of North Carolina, SCOTUS agrees to review the "independent state legislature" theory next term. USA22	Q didn't just randomly guess the one county in the US to show us election fraud No coincidence that it's Arizona and Maricopa are the keys in 2020 So keep that in mind with whatever happens with Kari Lake tomorrow There's always a greater reason at hand

USA25	Folks... busting the election fraud in the GOP primaries is a bigger and better red pill than exposing it in the general. The MSM will cover it, the normies and moderates are more likely to wake up if the first big exposures of election fraud are within the GOP. Think about it.
USA26	The question of if Trump's 'red wave' strategy works or not has been answered. It works. Kari Lake's win in one of the 6 corrupt battleground states in one of THE most corrupt counties proves it. MAGA/America First has the sheer numbers of voters and even the Uniparty's determined cheating can't override the red wave. In the 2 months and 3 weeks to Election Day in November for the midterms, expect all the usual suspects to being shrieking even louder as they insist 'real' patriots would not participate in these rigged election systems. They will grow increasingly frantic and incoherent the closer November gets. "Of course, Trump is telling all us patriots to get out and vote, but....!" is the giveaway. We know the election systems are rigged. And now we know how to BEAT THE SYSTEM. We will overwhelm their rigged election system again in November, and then Kari Lake is gonna clean house in AZ. And it all started with that huge primary victory this week. When so many patriots step up, when so many people get involved, all their clever vote fraud mechanisms get swept away. We will continue building the momentum and the wins into November. When the people show up, the cheaters get exposed. Trump knows this. Expect a ton more rallies between now and November as he continues building our massive red wave even bigger...and bigger...AND BIGGER...
USA27	Kari Lake is the biggest threat to the establishment since President Trump. She not only will make Arizona great as governor, she will play a pivotal role in restoring this country. She'll finish the wall, put a stop to drug & sex trafficking at the border, get to the bottom of the 2020 election and she'll hold those guilty of voter fraud responsible. As she has said, "There will be hell to pay!" She won every single county in the primary election despite so many evil forces working against her. She will prevail! God has His hand on her, and He will KARI her to the finish line.

USA28	If the Pit is about giving patriots viral tools and tech to prevent election fraud in the coming midterms, it's done a good job in that on the morning session. USA29	The Pit Overview by MJTruth Part 2 - The CCP has infiltrated every state with voting groups & targeted environments that were race dominant. 🚨 ——— Dr Peter McCullough - Data analysis shows that at least 40,000 people died of the Covid Vaccines within the first few days after given. - Most people receive a dud vaccine which is why it doesn't have the same effects for everyone. - 15% of vaccinated develop a new disease after. 🚨 ———Synopsis: Fam, the Goal of the Pit was to release everything to us, to set a fire under our asses & get active where we can. The tools provided were developed for us, the research Community to use as actionable intel to provide law enforcement to act upon. What was provided to us will further shine a light on what happened in 2020, & make as many corrective actions as we possibly can with the goal of decertification before it's too late & making sure it never happens again. We MUST fight the next war that the CCP has its eyes on RIGHT NOW, which is the 2022 midterms. What this means is that we LITERALLY get the results from the work we put into this. 5:5? POTUS asked us to vote and overwhelm the fraud. SO VOTE! He, although things still have not been "fixed", has an almost perfect record of candidates WINNING! Regardless of how anyone cleverly tries to wordsmith it, & directly/indirectly says it, anyone with a voice (a large platform) telling you not to vote in the 2022 election because "we haven't fixed 2020 yet", or "fix 2020 or BUST" or is not willing to fight a two-front war (2020 & 2022) together against the CCP is an enemy of America. There are things I'm working on with everyone behind the scenes… We are hopefully about to light a fuse with what we have learned….. an explosion that will cause the massive RED WAVE POTUS & Scavino talk about. *There was no mention or talk about Q, besides our own conversations. I'd be remiss if I did not mention the fact that I believe there is a multi- tier; effort to save America…. Activating the general public to get involved & the clandestine military operation that POTUS has put in place behind the scenes.
USA30	The Pit Overview by MJTruth Part 1 🚨 ——— Open.ink Is a free open-source resource with everything election fraud related & literally everything uncovered that wasn't in 2000 Mules. Upon rolling out, open.ink has been attacked by the CCP. Notes: - You have to request access. All materials aren't there yet… it's massive. It's a work in progress. - It will include data (video pictures, documents, voter roll information - Video evidence requires special players - Actionable & developing intel can be added open.ink will require deep analytical researchers to dive in, package it & give to your local authorities to investigate… see below. 👇👇

🚨 ——— ProtectAmerica.vote

True the Vote is partnering with our local Sherrifs all across the country.
These are the sherrifs that we can package and present our findings to.

The goal is to unite citizens and their sheriffs to work together.

TTV will provide local Sheriffs with the training, resources and tools to have real-time eyes on voting in their county.
• Providing information on election laws specific to their state
• Developing a grants function to provide technology and support for visibility into allegations of violations as reported throughout their county

1. Sign up! Get in contact with your local Sheriff.

2. Please understand, there are lots of Sherrifs who may not be on board, or unaware or not on board YET. Talk to your local Sheriff and tell him about it. Ask him to contact Sherrif Lamb or True The Vote.

🚨 ——— Discern Science, the AI Lie Detector

First— understand we have a huge problem in America with people selling American owned intellectual properties & technologies to foreign countries, e.g. China. When they do this, their country prospers and our country suffers financially.

Second— This software is focused on companies/entities/organizations that deal in the creation of highly classified material or technology that are being created in America to be used for the betterment of America.

🚨 ——— Botipedia
is another tool, and a researchers dream. I do not say that lightly. It is game changer which will change the landscape and be the go-to for unbiased information. Botipedia creates a wiki entry for absolutely everything…

Botipedia utilizes AI technology and will be open source & decentralized.
Decentralized meaning there will be no one governing authority. This is important.

I really liked that it provides a slider to view typical left wing resources as well as typical right wing resources. Unbiased data is the only way to go.

The best thing about the Botipedia tool from what I saw was that anyone, regardless of your technical expertise will be able to use this and understand a great deal about a subject, person & their affiliations.

It's unclear if Botipedia is live yet. I believe it's in beta and getting ready to roll out. I can't stress enough how useful this will be for researchers.

🚨 ——— x10 worse than Mules #TigerProject

There is a company K, an election management co. linked to the CCP. True the Vote uncovered a server at a University in Wuhan, China through a default gateway password, which held a vast amount of personal information on roughly 1.8 million U.S. election workers, Names (even their kids), addresses, a MASSIVE National Security threat.

At the time, TTV & Gregg handed everything over to the FBI. In hindsight, they said it was a massive mistake but they didn't know what else to do with what they found & they were the appropriate party to hand it to.

The FBI instead of investigating the Chinese about this national security threat, Gregg & Catherine is now under a target investigation for stealing these server(s) from the Chinese.

🚨 ——— There were other impressive speakers & info, which I suggest you just watch when it's released in a week or so…. But here are some footnotes:

- China is at the center of what happened re: George Floyd in an effort to burn down the country under Donald Trump. They utilized Chinese affiliated or funded groups such as BLM, Agents of Black Lives, Liberation Road, Seed the vote etc…

USA36	I'm tired of tiptoeing around this subject. Let me make something clear to the "fix 2020 or bust" crowd. Some of you, not all, imply that if we don't fix 2020, "that's it, we're toast." Some of you, not all, take it as, "why vote when it doesn't count" or have the mentality that you will not vote in any election ever again. I hate to break it to you, since AT LEAST the early 2000's our elections have been manipulated by algorithms & machines. https://rumble.com/v1h6lwn-clinton-eugene-curtis-elections-have-been-stolen-using-machine-algorithms-s.html Since the 1970's, but more dominantly in the early 1990s, the Chinese agenda was evident. Today, you can't deny the control they have on the US political landscape & our elections. They have been handpicking politicians for a long time. Politicians throughout the years sold us on the ideas that we were changing the CCP, but really the CCP was changing us through decade long infiltration operations that spread to every sector of the federal & state levels via bribery & blackmail, because they could never defeat America head on, hence the irregular warfare. Most, if not all of elections from the early 2000's up until 2020 have been manipulated & you voted in every single one. No elections…. None, I repeat NONE were ever fixed. Despite all odds, Donald Trump won in 2016 with very little political power….? But somehow lost in 2020 when he was the most powerful man on the planet? If you don't get it yet, Donald Trump ALLOWED them the steal the election which served multiple purposes that will change the world for a very long time. 1. Wake up the American People With evidence like the DoD having patents & the ability to monitor elections in real time as well as flip the votes (hammer & scorecard) https://rumble.com/v1f44u1-sidney-powell-master-compilation-dod-patents-that-monitor-and-flip-election.html 2. Through EO's take back our country! (13961, 13848, 13839 (schedule F) +++) - EO 13961 protect this country during this transition from deep state back to We, The People…. - EO 13848, take back all US assets owned by the CCP, Bill Gates & the like who interfered in a US election - EO 13839, draining the swamp of the US government stripping away all protections currently in place. - Not to mention HR 5404 & the EO's he put in place to combat Human Trafficking… +++ That guy, YOUR POTUS, continues to ask us TO VOTE & OVERWHELM the fraud, the MAIL-IN fraud. https://rumble.com/v10fjtb-donald-trump-vote-were-going-to-make-sure-it-counts-from-another-

standpoint.html

Why would POTUS ask us to vote if our votes will be stolen?

WHY does it appear he's been solely focused on Mail-in Ballots & not necessarily the machines?

Fam— When he became POTUS, as Q says, IT WAS CHECKMATE! When he won, THEY ALL LOST!

In 2008, Obama had a slip of the tongue and stated, "it helps that democrats are in charge of the machines. https://rumble.com/v1gk9dn-barrack-obama-flashback-2008-it-helps-democrats-are-in-charge-of-the-machin.html

The machines are corrupt & have been proven to be manipulatable now. There are efforts by people like Mike Lindell to get rid of them… and we will! But Q eludes to the NSA shutting that shit down!

Don't you get it?????

Now all of the sudden there's an effort to get people NOT TO VOTE or discourage others to vote.

Fix 2020 or bust is to discourage you not to vote or make you feel if we don't fix 2020, it's all over.

This is a multi-tiered clandestine military operation working in tandem with us citizens to take back our country. Most people have tunnel vision so bad that they don't even realize that 43 States have already changed their election laws since 2020….. & we are not done.

This Truth by Trump is directed right at the normies. It hits several targets at once preparing the normies for what's coming. He's setting the table. First, he slams the corrupt FBI. What's about to happen? The corrupt members of the FBI that helped frame Trump for Obama and Hillary are finally about to be indicted. FISA is the start. Hey McCabe, you sleeping much? Second, he ties it to the stolen election. Why?

	Because it's all connected. These aren't isolated incidents, it is a massive conspiracy involving many people in and out of government. The normies don't know that. Third, he mentions that the amount of fraud has never been seen before in our country's history. Unprecedented Fourth, it will require a REMEDY that is also unprecedented. Who decides REMEDIES? Courts. Fifth, he offers the normies two solutions as a REMEDY, already knowing which one is coming. USA49	I hope people are paying attention to a key factor that we the people are carrying out with boots on the ground. Have you all noticed the lawsuits being filed against mail in ballots with no dates? Have you all noticed people showing up to drop boxes and watching criminals stuff them and reporting them in real time? Why is this a big deal? Because the fraud is being reported BEFORE the midterms elections occur. We learned from a year ago it's extremely hard to win these fraud cases with ballots AFTER an election has occurred. The people are stepping up to the plate and our efforts will be rewarded come November 8th. Be black pilled about Durham all you want. I honestly dgaf. We the people are going to get this done. @WokeSocieties us

After they've called millions of patriotic Americans "election deniers" for the past two years, the entire world will soon understand how full of shit they are.
USA52	The playbook is so blatantly obvious at this point: 1 - Get candidate on record refusing to accept election results before the election even occurs 2 - Steal the election 3 - Candidate refuses to accept election results (due to obvious fraud) 4 - Fake News says sEe! tOld yOu ThEy wOuLdnT AcCepT tHe rEsUltS!

USA55	Fam- some information has been brought to my attention and I've been sitting on it, praying on what to do with it. I understand this may stir some pots… please know it's definitely not my intention, but for the sake of transparency & those who attended The Pit with me, I believe this is something we should know. Public available court documents (Found Here (https://www.courtlistener.com/docket/65339680/konnech-inc-v-true-the-vote-inc/?filed_after=&filed_before=&entry_gte=&entry_lte=&order_by=desc)) show that Catherine & Gregg admit under oath to being CI's (confidential Informants) for the FBI. You need a CL account to view the court docs, but Here is a public available article

	(https://www.courthousenews.com/federal-judge-holds-tight-lipped-chiefs-of-election-denial-group-in-contempt/) transcribing the events of the proceedings. Paragraph 3, which States….

"With U.S. District Judge Kenneth Hoyt threatening them with fines and arrest in a contempt hearing Thursday, they took the witness stand and alleged they were working as confidential informants for the FBI from 2021 to May of this year, helping with an investigation of Konnech Inc., a Michigan-based company that sells software to help manage election equipment and poll workers."

Further down it states….

"Engelbrecht said she and Phillips lost their FBI confidential informant status in May after the criminal division of the Arizona Attorney General's Office, which had been working with the pair on election fraud investigations, started calling different FBI offices and inquiring about them."

What does all this mean?

I honestly don't know and I think it's still too early to tell and it'd be very wise on our part TO WAIT and see how this plays out. It would be very harmful to make statements under oath and it not be true.

*It does align with what they've shared, that they did try to go through the right channels (FBI), before they said they flipped on them later. Still, them being CI's were unknown to us.

They've done a ton of good work and they are highlighted constantly by Trump as doing good work. I'm remaining opinionless on this for now. I just felt it should be known.

The fog of war is thick. Disinformation is necessary. There are more good people than bad. Remember what I shared earlier (https://t.me/candlesinthenight/46164)

Continue to pray for God to lead us. 🙏

This is all the rage on the Brazilian net:

'I received the information here, now, that the 4th [voter audit] report will be delivered tomorrow. The tech people asked for another 24 hours to finalize and review the 4 reports.

But the frauds are proven, not only from [second round] but also from the [first round of voting], which is also included in the reports already received.

Bolsonaro will only speak about it with the evidence all constituted, and immediately charged to General Luiz do Supreme Military Tribunal, with a request for annulment of the election for president and indictment of all involved.

It seems that the act will only be a military investigation for 'crime de lesa pátria' [High Crimes], provided for in article 357.'

USA60	An #Antifa account in Portland, Ore. involved with planning riots is boasting about committing voter fraud & is encouraging his comrades to do the same. Oregon has universal mail-in voting. https://archive.ph/https://twitter.com/Redwood_PDX/status/1588639527249530880 https://twitter.com/Redwood_PDX/status/1588639527249530880
USA61	Let's just say things continue as they are headed. We get our #RedWave , the Left start crying "election fraud", "election interference", and then begin denying the results of the election. The Left will be in position to have their own "January 6th" moment. Think of the upcoming "fiery but mostly peaceful" coordinated protests/riots. If we get our #RedWave , I have a feeling the Left are gonna make January 6th look like a kid's birthday party. The hypocrisy is coming full circle. -Clandestine
USA62	As election day looms - let us not forget why we march forward with this sacred duty/honor in the face of those who say we shouldn't due to fraud: Our votes are the last line of defense against communism taking over this country. This is the most important election of our lifetime. The silent majority is silent no more, and we are coming to take our country back. We shall again become a Country of the people, by the people, and for the people. In God We Trust. 🙏 US ✝️ #RedWave #NCSWIC #WWG1WGA
USA63	Your vote is a weapon. Use it Tuesday. More election fraud has been exposed from 2020 than every election before it combined. It's decimating their current schemes. This was only possible because of how hard we voted. It's time to pile-on. And do it again and again and again until they're more exposed than a Hammer Brother at Nancy Pelosi's at 2am...
USA64	NEWSFLASH: Voter fraud is real. If your local media isn't taking your tips seriously, you can send them to Project Veritas at VeritasTips@protonmail.com We will have journalists around the country tomorrow chasing down the fraud wherever it is taking place! If you see something, say something, send us a message ASAP!
USA65	Maricopa County yesterday: "We're not gonna have election results on election night... The problem is that people out on social media will take the fact that we don't have final results on election day or early the next day as proof of fraud or allowing that people can start rigging the election..."
USA66	Anna Khait 👀 Update from Brazilian leaders: Military audit of the election will now be released Wednesday. Dozens of boxes had zero Bolsonaro votes. Evidence will be presented of fraud. The nation is on the brink of social collapse unless the military has a strong presence. There is great fear in Brazil being isolated by other nations especially in trade by the Biden administration. ^^ From a very trusted source in Brazil… https://twitter.com/Annakhait/status/1589742378528567296?s=20 📁 woopapa 🙏
USA67	WARNING... The post I X'd out of voter hotlines is making it's way through the patriot community. Don't forward it unless you want to support the Marxist organization (votesaveamerica.com) that created it. This is a typical Satanic reversal. I don't fault anyone that did this... they forwarded it with pure intent I'm sure. How do I know this was shady?

USA71 (continued from above)	The first thing that they mentioned was about voter intimidation and vote suppresion (this is usually the left's mantra)... So I went to their website and see the typical pride colors and that they are pushing pro abortion. Then they will help with "your vote" but using potential voter fraud as the lure. This was a public service announcement 😊 Share, share, share! @ScrewBigGov
USA68	2020 Exposed the RINO Politicians (those who turned on Trump after Deep State commited massive fraud and they thought he was done) 2022 is Exposing the RINO Pundits They're spreading despair as if there WASNT massive fraud this time. Even blaming Trump (how does that even make sense) We knew there would be the same cheating, I've said it in damn near every live stream of the past 3 months. We simply attempted to out-vote it and it seems like we may have in the House. This is clearly their current assignment from their deep state handlers as I can tell: 1. Act like we lost without blaming any of the clear-cut fraud. (Creates the false sense of a fair election) 2. Instead, blame the Patriotic citizens who got you to vote (this is important for demoralization) 3. Use this to turn people against Trump (Saul alinsky said, utilize all the events of a period for your purpose) 4. Make sure people are too pissed to document the statistical anomalies like they did after 2020
USA69	Kari Lake gains validity with every passing hour that the AZ race is not called. It's been 24+ hours since the polls closed, and we are still stuck at around 70% reporting. Take the whole week to count. Go ahead. Patriots out-voted the fraud, and Katie Hobbs knows it. The longer they take, the more it justifies the investigations Kari Lake is about to unleash on election integrity in AZ. Kari is about to go scorched-earth and I for one am all about it. -Clandestine
USA70	Yesterday I posted a video regarding duplicate New York numbers in virtually every county. Fake News is trying to discredit it. https://t.me/candlesinthenight/47916 This data is from DDHQ (Decision Desk HQ), as it is verified on the video itself. DDHQ data (verified in video. Top left corner) New York had 99% votes in at 8:33PM ET. There was never an escalation of votes in. 8:33PM, BAM! 99% done. At 8:33PM, the data from DDHQ was notated as having virtually ALL the same counties reporting the same numbers. Mathematically impossible! New Yorkers got SCREWED! DDHQ is an officially sourced resource for election reporting. https://en.m.wikipedia.org/wiki/Decision_Desk_HQ If you look at the data now, it is different because obviously we are a day out from when it was found. It's very easy to change, especially after they were busted! USA73	The AZ election was the final straw. The fix was in the entire time. You all did your job though. You showed up to the polls to vote. You volunteered your time and effort. Many worked at the polls...others spread awareness within their social circles. There was a massive red wave. There is no denying it. We watched the fraud play out in real time over the past week around the country. It happened in many locations. It was more than obvious. They couldn't even cover it up. The key reminder was last night shortly after 9PM when the AZ SOS Web page being used to track uncounted ballots went down for about 45 minutes. The real joke was when it redirected to a maintenance page that reminded us that Katie Hobbs was behind it all. We will not stand for this. We are going to see what Trump's announcement is today and hopefully we'll understand things a little better afterwards...but at the end of the day, it is up to WE THE PEOPLE. Remember, you are Americans. The Republic must be restored. Let your voice be heard.

USA78	Q's first word tonight in the latest drop was "Runbeck". So let's look back at the election fraud hearings in AZ that were held after the 2020 election and what was said about Runbeck… November 30, 2020: Jan Bryant testified that Runbeck was bringing truckloads of ballots to the Maricopa tabulation center for at least 7 days AFTER the election. Listen to this lady's testimony! Sure looks they did the same thing for these midterm elections (obviously) and we were just told in the latest drop. Time to show the world.

| USA81 | Remember the case, Brunsun v Adam's (https://t.me/candlesinthenight/48309) where it involves removing the President and all of Congress?

A response was due on November 23.
There's been an update.

Waiver:
The government nearby waives its right to file a response to the petition in this case, unless requested to do so by the court.

Brunson updated his Fabook saying:
"Solicitor general of the United States Department of Justice, replaced the US attorneys for the defendants on my lawsuit, and as of today, waived their right to respond to my lawsuit! The Supreme Court of the United States can move forward on my case!"

My thoughts:
This case is not about challenging the election results or about fraud, but about elected officials failing to look into or block attempts of a 10 day legally required review.

| USA83 | So now it is learned that the FBI, and others in conjunction with the "Justice" Department, met with Big Tech companies to bend them into saying bad things about "Trump" and Republicans in order to RIG & STEAL the 2020 Presidential Election, which was a Scam and a Fraud. Now additional evidence, different but just as illegal and sinister as the many other forms of cheating used, is flowing out of the crevices of this corrupt wound. This is big "stuff." DO SOMETHING as our Country Melts!!!

https://truthsocial.com/users/realDonaldTrump/statuses/109446783460038797 |
| USA84 | So, with the revelation of MASSIVE & WIDESPREAD FRAUD & DECEPTION in working closely with Big Tech Companies, the DNC, & the Democrat Party, do you throw the Presidential Election Results of 2020 OUT and declare the RIGHTFUL WINNER, or do you have a NEW ELECTION? A Massive Fraud of this type and magnitude allows for the termination of all rules, regulations, and articles, even those found in the Constitution. Our great "Founders" did not want, and would not condone, False & Fraudulent Elections!

| USA85 | Wow! That's a really big story about Twitter and various forms of government Fraud including, specifically, Election Fraud. The same level of Fraud took place with the other Big Tech companies, if not even worse (if that's possible?). We are living in a VERY CORRUPT COUNTRY &, AS THEY ARE SAYING ALL OVER THE INTERNET, "NOTHING WILL BE DONE ABOUT IT BECAUSE THE JUSTICE DEPARTMENT & FBI ARE TOTALLY CORRUPT." But they'll keep investigating "boxes" that were legally & openly taken from the W.H.

| USA86 | Josh Barnett has filed a motion to reverse the dismissal of his case (asking a judge to block Arizona's election certification) due to fraud.

"But Counsel D. Andrew Gaona failed to inform this Court, your Honor, or Plaintiff, that he took the exact opposite position in defense of Defendant, Arizona Secretary of State Katie Hobbs, in his Motion To Dismiss of November 16, 2020, in the case, AZGOP v. Adrian Fontes."

USA87	Trump Truths SIMPLY PUT, IF AN ELECTION IS IRREFUTABLY FRAUDULENT, IT SHOULD GO TO THE RIGHTFUL WINNER OR, AT A MINIMUM, BE REDONE. WHERE OPEN AND BLATANT FRAUD IS INVOLVED, THERE SHOULD BE NO TIME LIMIT FOR CHANGE! The Fake News is actually trying to convince the American People that I said I wanted to "terminate" the Constitution. This is simply more DISINFORMATION & LIES, just like RUSSIA, RUSSIA, RUSSIA, and all of their other HOAXES & SCAMS. What I said was that when there is "MASSIVE & WIDESPREAD FRAUD & DECEPTION," as has been irrefutably proven in the 2020 Presidential Election, steps must be immediately taken to RIGHT THE WRONG. Only FOOLS would disagree with that and accept STOLEN ELECTIONS. MAGA!

This case is not about the outcome of the election. It's not about saying there's fraud that we should change the outcome. It's simply a case where we're saying that there was a major Security breach, when 100 witnesses, 100 members of Congress were saying there needs to be an investigation, and the other members of Congress don't pause for 10 days but instead charge ahead & certify an electoral vote, when there are causes to investigate…… the Supreme Court now has the power to remove & bar permanently from holding office the rest of their life, 385 sitting members of Congress, the VP & President." GER02	Statement von Bioclandestine 1/2 (https://t.me/bioclandestine/414): Dies wird für viele ein sehr unangenehmes Gespräch sein, aber jemand muss sich melden. Dies ist ein Thema, über das ich nie direkt spreche, aber heute werden wir darüber sprechen. Wir werden ein Gespräch unter Erwachsenen über Q führen. Genauer gesagt, über die Leute, die über Q reden, die Anons. Um meinen Ausführungen voranzugehen: Diejenigen, die mich kennen, wissen, dass ich zu den Anfängen zurückkehre. Ich verfolge die Drops seit Halloween 2017. Ich war früher ein beliebter Anon auf Twitter unter vielen verschiedenen Namen, ich habe jeden Drop unzählige Male gelesen. Ich bin die ganze Zeit gefolgt. Ich bin ein Anon, ich vermeide es nur absichtlich, direkt über Q zu sprechen, um eine für Normalsterbliche und all jene, die von der Q-Community abgeschreckt werden, besser verdauliche Nachrichten zu verfassen. Q hat nun nach 18 Monaten ohne Kommunikation wieder angefangen zu posten, was in der Anon-Gemeinschaft natürlich für viel Aufregung gesorgt hat. Aber mit dieser Aufregung kommt auch eine Menge neuer schrecklicher Dekodierungen/Interpretationen und ungeheuerliche Versuche, Verbindungen herzustellen, die es einfach nicht gibt. Leute, ihr müsst erkennen, dass es dieses Mal anders ist. Wir haben uns in den letzten 18 Monaten ein verdammt großes Publikum aufgebaut. Wir sind jetzt buchstäblich die Nachrichten. Ich bringe große Berichte, wie z. B., dass Russland US-Biolabore ins Visier genommen hat, während die Medien Nazis loben und gefälschte Kriegspropaganda verbreiten. Prominente Gäste wie Gregg Phillips, Kash Patel, Dinesh D'Souza, Trumps Anwalt Peter Ticktin usw. sind in Anon-Podcasts und -Sendungen zu Gast. Viele Leute kommen jetzt wegen ihrer Nachrichten zu Anons, weil die Medien völlig von der Klippe gefallen sind und wir die TATSÄCHLICHEN Nachrichten liefern. Nicht mit Drops und Dekodierungen, sondern mit realen Beweisen wie Biden, der das Land in den Abgrund reißt, Gaspreise, Wahlbetrug durch Briefwahl, C19 kam aus dem Wuhan-Labor, Durham, Russland beschuldigt das DNC der Verbrechen gegen die Menschheit durch Bio-Genozid, Hunter Biden Laptop und schmutzige Geschäfte in der Ukraine, Epstein. All diese realen Beweise haben die Leute zu uns gelockt, weil wir mit all diesen Dingen Recht hatten und die MSM völlig falsch lagen. Jetzt, wo Q wieder da ist, werden diese tatsächlichen Nachrichten und Beweise durch populäre Anons in der Community getrübt, die dümmliche "Dekodierungen" vornehmen, wie z.B. 765 Leerzeichen zwischen den Wörtern in einem zufälligen Drop zu finden, dies durch 17 zu teilen und es ist gleich 45, und das soll irgendwie bedeuten, dass alles von Q legitim ist. So etwas mag für die Leute lustig sein, aber es hilft der Bewegung in keiner Weise. Alle Leute, die auf diese lächerlichen Nicht-Verbindungen hereinfallen, sind Leute, die bereits Q folgen. Sie wecken niemanden auf. Sie helfen nicht. Aber hier ist, wie es der Bewegung schadet: -Es spielt den Kritikern in die Hände, um euch zu diskreditieren -Es schreckt die Normalos ab, weil es keinen Sinn ergibt und nichts beweist. -es schwächt die Wirkung echter Beweise durch Assoziation "Die Zeit für obskure, weitreichende und verworrene Beweise ist vorbei." Natürlich spreche ich nicht für alle, aber ich empfehle der gesamten Anon-Gemeinschaft eine ernsthafte Selbsteinschätzung über sich selbst und darüber, welche Inhalte sie für geeignet halten, zu posten/zu fördern.

	Zu viele in der Gemeinschaft vergessen, was das Hauptziel der Mission ist. Die Mission besteht NICHT darin, zu sehen, wer die meisten Follower oder 10.000 Likes für ein lustiges Meme bekommt. Die Mission ist es, die Normalos aufzuwecken, um den Guten im Hintergrund mit globaler Akzeptanz für hochkarätige Verhaftungen und Verbrechen gegen die Menschlichkeit zu helfen. Das ist eure einzige Aufgabe, und es ist längst überfällig, dass alle anfangen, sie ernster zu nehmen. GER10	Die neue strafrechtliche Ermittlung in Trump lenkt niemanden mehr vom eigentlichen Thema ab: Hunter Bidens Laptop, dessen Inhalt inzwischen öffentlich einsehbar ist Ich glaube, hier entkommen die beiden Bidens nicht mehr. Etliches von der Festplatte steht bereits online, und es gibt eine Homepage, geführt von ehemaligen Trump-Mitarbeitern aus dem Weißen Haus, die diese explosive Inhalte hostet. Aber die Republikaner müssen im November massenhaft wählen, denn der Wahlbetrug ist wieder unterwegs in Form von Bussen, die die Stimmzettel einsammeln. Für die Novemberwahl, wohlgemerkt. Das amerikanische System ist sehr vulnerabel, denn die haben nun bis zu drei Monate Zeit, die Stimmzettel zu verändern. Trotzdem - Biden dürfte nicht mehr zu halten sein, den haben sie heute gerade wieder in Quarantäne gesteckt, aus der Schusslinie geholt, denn Hunter Bidens Laptop ist in aller Munde. Dass Trump aus dieser Nummer wieder rauskommt, das dürfte klar sein. Denn die Anschuldigungen sind, wie immer, haltlos. Das wissen die Demokraten auch. Es ist, wie immer nur Ablenkung. Das Spiel geht jetzt seit sechs Jahren, denn es fing an, als Trump seine Kandidatur ankündigte. Spätestens mit Trumps berühmter Wahlkampfrede vom 13. Oktober 2016 begann die Hexenjagd auf ihn, denn darin sagte er alles, was man über den tiefen Staat und den Kampf der Patrioten gegen ihn wissen muss. Die FakeNewsMedien, Big Tech und das gesamte linke Establishment bekämpfen ihn seitdem und was haben sie sich nicht alles einfallen lassen. Der Russland-Absprachen-Schwindel mit anschließender Untersuchung von Sonderermittler Mueller. Das Endergebnis war nichts. Amtsenthebung I und Amtsenthebung II. Das Endergebnis war nichts. Seine Steuererklärung, die Pandemievorwürfe, und jetzt die Razzia in Mar-A-Lago. Das Endergebnis nichts. Im Gegenteil. Bei jeder einzelnen Attacke gelang es Trump, die Verleumder zu entlarven und vorzuführen, ihre miesen Tricks und Lügen und ihre kriminellen Machenschaften aufzudecken. Jeder Schuß des Deep State ging nach hinten los und in der Summe hat er sich komplett zerstört. Warum Deinen Feind dabei stören, wenn er sich selbst zerlegt. Und über den größten Wahlbetrug aller Zeiten haben wir jetzt noch gar nicht gesprochen. Das alles hat dazu geführt, dass die Amerikaner aufgewacht sind und das ist der größte Alptraum für den tiefen Staat.

Denke daran, was jetzt gerade passiert. Wir haben Trump mit Truth Social. Er hat alle Hebel in der Hand. Er hat alles über den tiefen Staat, was mit Russland-Schwindel zu tun hat. Er hat alles über die Clintons. Er hat alles gegen die Bidens in der Hand. Durham jagt diese Leute und entlarvt das FBI und das Justizministerium, als Bodyguards der Akteure des tiefen Staates. Und dann ist da noch Elon Musk. Elon Musk nimmt es mit wem auf? Mit Big Tech. Elon Musk ergreift jetzt das Megafon und entreißt es den Akteuren des tiefen Staates. Dann denke an Kanye West. Kanye West stellt sich jetzt gegen Hollywood, die CIA und viele andere. All dies geschieht genau zur gleichen Zeit. Außerdem haben wir Informationen über Wahlbetrug erhalten. Das Justizministerium und die Regierung von Biden bitten den Obersten Gerichtshof, die Entscheidung darüber, wer die Gesetze für die Wahlen macht, nicht weiter zu verfolgen. Das sollte nicht passieren. Sie sind deswegen in Panik. Hillary Clinton hat Videos veröffentlicht, in denen sie sagt, dass die Rechtsextremisten, die weißen Rassisten, versuchen werden, die Wahlen zu stehlen. Im Grunde genommen projiziert sie, was sie selbst versuchen werden. Denke daran, dass ihr gesamtes System auf Lügen beruht. GER81	BREAKING: Catherine Engelbrecht und Gregg Phillips aus dem Gefängnis entlassen - Hier ist das Neueste...
	100 Percent Fed Up berichtet: Am Montag hat Bundesrichter Kenneth Hoyt die Gründerin von True the Vote, Catherine Engelbrecht, und den Ermittler von True the Vote, Gregg Phillips, wegen Missachtung des Gerichts verurteilt, weil sie sich geweigert hatten, einen vertraulichen Informanten zu identifizieren, der ihnen geholfen hatte, Informationen zu erhalten, die zur Entdeckung und später zum Nachweis führten, dass das in E. Lansing, MI, ansässige Wahlsoftwareunternehmen Konnech wahlbezogene Daten auf Servern in China speicherte.
	Diese beiden amerikanischen Helden und Kämpfer, die tapfer dafür kämpfen, dass unsere Wahlen frei und fair sind und nicht gestohlen werden können, befinden sich mitten im Kampf gegen sechs Gerichtsverfahren im Zusammenhang mit ihrer Arbeit zur Aufdeckung von Wahlbetrug in Amerika. Heute Morgen postete Gregg Phillips ein Foto von sich in einem orangefarbenen Overall in einem Bundesgefängnis auf Truth Social.
	Er postete auch ein Update:
	Der 5. Bundesgerichtshof erwägt immer noch eine Notentlassung.
	Dies könnte das erste Mal in der Geschichte der USA sein, dass Amerikaner wegen einer zivilrechtlichen Verleumdungsklage ins Gefängnis kommen.
	Heute Abend gab Catherine Engelbrecht bekannt, dass sie aus dem Bundesgefängnis entlassen wurden und nun frei sind! Gelobt sei der Herr!!!!
	Catherine Engelbrecht gab nach ihrer Freilassung die folgende Erklärung ab:
	Diejenigen, die dachten, dass die Inhaftierung von Gregg und mir unsere Entschlossenheit schwächen würde, haben sich gewaltig verkalkuliert. Sie ist stärker denn je.
	Das Recht auf freie und faire Wahlen ohne Einmischung ist wichtiger als unsere eigenen Unannehmlichkeiten und sogar diese Inhaftierung, die jetzt von einem höheren Gericht aufgehoben wurde.
	Dafür sind wir zutiefst dankbar. Wir werden auch weiterhin diejenigen schützen und verteidigen, die die wichtige Arbeit der Wahlintegrität leisten, und wir werden dafür sorgen, dass ihre Ergebnisse öffentlich bekannt werden.
	- Catherine Engelbrecht, True the Vote

	Es hat den Anschein, dass Maricopa alles in seiner Macht Stehende unternimmt, um die geplante Verschiebung der Wahl zu rechtfertigen, damit sie Wählerbetrug begehen können.
	Der Gouverneurswahlkampf in Arizona steht für die Haltung Amerikas zum Thema Wahlbetrug. Es ist der Prüfstein für das öffentliche Erwachen, und es könnte sehr wahrscheinlich zum Ende des Demokratischen Nationalkomitees führen, und der Tiefe Staat weiß das.
	Falls Kari Lake antritt und den "Ground Zero für Wählerbetrug" aufdeckt, ist das Demokratische Nationalkomitee erledigt.
	Es gibt nur ein einziges Wahlrennen, welches das Demokratische Nationalkomitee stehlen MUSS, nämlich dieses.

Die Botschaften sind völlig aus dem Ruder gelaufen. Liegt ein Wahlbetrug vor oder nicht? Wenn ja, muss man sich damit befassen und es stoppen, bevor man sich über 2024 freuen kann. Wenn die Zwischenwahlen unwichtig waren, warum hat man sie dann als die "Wahl zur Rettung Amerikas" hochgespielt? Und jetzt sollen wir uns einfach nicht darum kümmern und uns auf 2024 freuen? Das wird nicht funktionieren. Das ist inakzeptabel. BioClandestine, [16.11.2022 04:24] Viele missverstehen meine Kritik als "Schwarzmalerei" oder "Jammern". Wir wussten, dass das passieren würde. Das war das Mindeste, was wir erwartet haben. Aber dass Trump dies als "historischen Tag für unser Land" hochjubelt, nachdem wir gerade gesehen haben, wie uns zwei Wahlen gestohlen wurden... das ist mehr als ungehörig. Ich liebe Trump. Und wir als Trumps Unterstützer müssen ihn zur Rechenschaft ziehen, wenn es gerechtfertigt ist. Und heute ist es gerechtfertigt. Er hat dies als "historischen Tag für unser Land" hochgespielt und erwartet, dass wir motiviert sind, für ihn zu stimmen, nachdem wir Zeuge einer weiteren gestohlenen Wahl geworden sind. Ein Konflikt zwischen dem Obersten Gerichtshof, der auf der Seite von Lula steht, und den Militärs, die auf der Seite von Bolsonaro stehen, zeichnet sich ab. Der linke Oberste Richter Alexandre de Moraes, der es dem verurteilten kommunistischen Betrüger Luiz Inácio Lula da Silva ermöglichte, überhaupt für das Präsidentenamt zu kandidieren, will Verteidigungsminister General Paulo Sergio Nogueira absetzen lassen. Bereits am Mittwoch dem 16.11. hat Alexandre de Moraes einen Antrag des stellvertretenden Richters Marcelo Calero an die Generalstaatsanwaltschaft geschickt, um den Verteidigungsminister abzusetzen, berichtet O Antagonista. Am 10. November reichte das Verteidigungsministerium, wie gesetzlich vorgeschrieben, seinen Bericht über die Wahlen vom 30. Oktober beim Obersten Wahlgericht ein, in dem es heißt, dass "nicht ausgeschlossen werden kann, dass das elektronische Wahlsystem frei von Schadprogrammen ist, die seine Funktion beeinträchtigen könnten". Anstatt die Vorwürfe zu untersuchen, behauptete der Oberste Gerichtshof, der Bericht gefährde die physische Sicherheit der Bürger, die unfreiwillig zu Protesten ermutigt werden - als ob die mehr als drei Millionen Brasilianer, die am Tag der Republik, dem 15. November, auf die Straße gingen, um gegen den Wahlbetrug zu protestieren, nicht wirklich wüssten, was sie da taten. Seit dem massiven Betrug bei der Stichwahl am 30. Oktober in Brasilien protestieren täglich Millionen von Brasilianern auf den Straßen gegen den Wahlbetrug durch den kommunistischen, verurteilten Kriminellen Luiz Inácio Lula da Silva. Am Tag der Republik gingen erneut Millionen auf die Straße, vor allem in Rio de Janeiro und der Hauptstadt Brasilía, aber auch in kleineren Städten im ganzen Land. GER107	Bürgerkrieg droht in Brasilien: Linksradikaler Oberster Gerichtshof will Verteidigungsminister entlassen, nachdem er über gestohlene Wahlen berichtet hat Während Hunderttausende in Brasilien weiterhin auf den Straßen protestieren, will der korrupte linke Oberste Richter Alexandre de Moraes den Verteidigungsminister absetzen, weil er in Bezug auf die gestohlenen Wahlen die Wahrheit gesagt hat. Ein Konflikt zwischen dem Obersten Gerichtshof, der auf der Seite von Lula steht, und den Militärs, die auf der Seite von Bolsonaro stehen, zeichnet sich ab.

Der linke Oberste Richter Alexandre de Moraes, der es dem verurteilten kommunistischen Betrüger Luiz Inácio Lula da Silva ermöglichte, überhaupt für das Präsidentenamt zu kandidieren, will Verteidigungsminister General Paulo Sergio Nogueira absetzen lassen.

Bereits am Mittwoch dem 16.11. hat Alexandre de Moraes einen Antrag des stellvertretenden Richters Marcelo Calero an die Generalstaatsanwaltschaft geschickt, um den Verteidigungsminister abzusetzen, berichtet O Antagonista.

Am 10. November reichte das Verteidigungsministerium, wie gesetzlich vorgeschrieben, seinen Bericht über die Wahlen vom 30. Oktober beim Obersten Wahlgericht ein, in dem es heißt, dass "nicht ausgeschlossen werden kann, dass das elektronische Wahlsystem frei von Schadprogrammen ist, die seine Funktion beeinträchtigen könnten".

Anstatt die Vorwürfe zu untersuchen, behauptete der Oberste Gerichtshof, der Bericht gefährde die physische Sicherheit der Bürger, die unfreiwillig zu Protesten ermutigt werden - als ob die mehr als drei Millionen Brasilianer, die am Tag der Republik, dem 15. November, auf die Straße gingen, um gegen den Wahlbetrug zu protestieren, nicht wirklich wüssten, was sie da taten.

Der mit Lula-Kumpanen besetzte linksextreme Oberste Gerichtshof bezeichnete die massiven Straßenproteste gegen ihren Betrügerkandidaten als einen Verstoß gegen die Verfassung - möglicherweise handelt es sich um den größten Volksaufstand der Weltgeschichte.

GER116	Brasilianisches Militär tötet „Comando Vermelho"-Kartellführer und bereitet Übernahme vor In einem für das Militär ungewöhnlichen Schritt ist die Armee in Favelas von Rio de Janeiro eingedrungen und hat führende Vertreter des Drogenkartells Comando Vermelho getötet, das den kommunistischen Verbrecher Luiz Inácio Lula da Silva unterstützt.

	Beobachter werten dies als Beginn einer föderalen Militärintervention. Die Drogenbanden waren die einzigen, die den angeblichen Wahlsieg des Kriminellen Lula am 30. Oktober feierten und in den Favelas mit automatischen Waffen in die Luft schossen. Präsident Bolsonaro ging hart gegen die brasilianischen Drogenbanden vor. Die Drogenkartelle sind der bewaffnete Arm der Kommunisten. Das Comando Vermelho kontrolliert Teile von Rio de Janeiro und wurde 1979 als eine Allianz zwischen Kartellen und Kommunisten gegründet. Wenn sie ausgeschaltet werden, wird das Risiko eines Bürgerkriegs erheblich verringert. Hunderttausende von Brasilianern protestierten am Wochenende erneut vor Armeestützpunkten und forderten die Armee auf, ihr Land vor den Kommunisten und Kartellen zu retten. Das korrupte Oberste Wahlgericht hat den Termin für die Bestätigung der gestohlenen Wahlen vom 19. Dezember auf Montag, den 12. Dezember, 14.00 Uhr vorverlegt. Beobachter glauben, dass das prokommunistische Gericht schnell handeln will, um seinen Kandidaten Lula da Silva zu installieren, und möglicherweise sogar die Zertifizierung des Wahlbetrugs auf diese Woche vorverlegt. Die Amtseinführung ist für den 1. Januar 2023 vorgesehen. Dies setzt das Oberkommando des Militärs unter Druck, zu handeln, bevor es zu spät ist. Im Gespräch mit Steve Bannon wies der Brasilien-Beobachter Matt Tyrmand darauf hin, dass das Pro-Bolsonaro-Militär in Gefahr sei, gesäubert zu werden, wenn der korrupte Kriminelle Lula die Macht übernimmt. "Dann geht es ab in die Gulags", so Tyrmand. Der stellvertretende Generalstaatsanwalt des Militärs, Carlos Frederico de Oliveira Pereira, richtete am 25. November ein Schreiben an den Generalstaatsanwalt des Militärs, Antonio Pereira Duarte, in dem er feststellte, dass "die vom Verteidigungsministerium geforderten Schritte bei der Inspektion des elektronischen Wahlsystems nicht eingehalten wurden". In dem Schreiben wurde auch eine "mögliche Einmischung ausländischer Unternehmen in den Wahlprozess" beklagt, "die nicht überprüft werden konnte, da die Militärs des genannten Teams keinen umfassenden Zugang zu Informationen im Zusammenhang mit dem Wahlprozess haben, im Gegensatz zu diesen Big-Tech-Unternehmen, die eine Partnerschaft mit dem Wahlgericht unterhalten. Es sollte eine Untersuchung über ein mögliches Verbrechen gegen die äußere Sicherheit des Landes im Zusammenhang mit einem möglichen Cyberangriff durchgeführt werden", heißt es in dem Schreiben. Die offizielle Erklärung des Artikels 142, der es dem Militär erlaubt, im Falle eines Konflikts zwischen den Regierungszweigen einzugreifen, wird diese Woche erwartet. Es wurden Soldaten gesehen , die sich den Demonstranten anschlossen und sie anwiesen, ruhig zu bleiben, wenn es zur Aktion kommt. Die Fahrer bejubelten Militärkonvois, die an strategischen Orten im ganzen Land stationiert waren. GER119	Das könnte spannend werden .. 👁 US Supreme Court prüft Fall, um Präsidentschaftswahlen 2020 zu kippen! Der Fall Brunson gegen Adams, über den in den Mainstream-Medien nicht einmal berichtet wurde, wurde von gewöhnlichen amerikanischen Bürgern - vier Brüdern aus Utah - pro se eingereicht, die die Absetzung von Präsident Biden und Vizepräsident Harris sowie von 291 US-Repräsentanten und 94 US-Senatoren anstreben, die dafür gestimmt haben, die Wahlmänner für das Wahlmännerkollegium am 6. Januar 2021 zu bestätigen, ohne zuvor schwerwiegende Vorwürfe des Wahlbetrugs in einem halben Dutzend Staaten und der ausländischen Wahleinmischung und Verletzung der nationalen Sicherheit bei den Präsidentschaftswahlen 2020 zu untersuchen. 🤔 Das Ergebnis einer solchen Entlastung wäre vermutlich die Wiedereinsetzung von Donald Trump in das Amt des Präsidenten. Die wichtigen nationalen Sicherheitsinteressen, die in diesem Fall eine Rolle spielen, haben es den Brunsons ermöglicht, eine Berufung zu umgehen, die beim U.S. Court of Appeals for the 10th Circuit eingefroren war, und den Fall vor den Supreme Court zu bringen, der nun eine Anhörung für den 6. Januar 2023 angesetzt hat. Die Brunson-Petition für ein Writ of Certiorari würde die Stimmen von nur vier Richtern erfordern, um den Fall voranzubringen. Quelle: Gatewaypundit
