

Abstract of dissertation

This dissertation is entitled The administration and office work of town Krupka in early modern period with the subheading The development of town administration till 1710. The main goal of this work is, on the basis of the extant archival sources, to acquaint with the development of administration of mining town, of which specific is not only mining as a principal source of livelihood of its inhabitants, but also its location on the border with neighbouring Saxony. Another goal of this dissertation is to present the offices of municipal and mining administration and also names of specific people in these offices, if they are still extant in the sources or literature.

The content of this dissertation is proceeded in the first place from abundantly extant archives, which is placed in archiv in Teplice, primarily from memorial books, official books and file material.

This dissertation is divided into several sections. The first mainstay includes summarization of history of administration of town Krupka, description of relations between town Krupka and manorial lords, religious circumstances and also development of mining. Next part of dissertation deals with introduction of the most important officials of the administration of the town Krupka and also of the administration of mining. This part is supplemented with name listing of officials, if they are extant in the sources. Transliteration of the most important historical sources and supplementation of photos of historical sources are also beneficial.