

Bachelor's case study named „Treatment complications in dual diagnosis „eating disorder/alcohol addiction““ highlights the issue of treatment of dual diagnosis.

The main goal of the study is to contribute to scientific discussion heading towards the creation of specialized departments and systems of care for the treatment of dual diagnosis. Collected information - both of the literature search and the case studies - show that the issue of dual diagnosis' eating disorders and addiction to alcohol is quite extensive. At the same time, this dual diagnosis is a great complication of treatment.

It is an important finding that due to available information there has been no specialized integrated workplace for the treatment of this specific dual diagnosis in the Czech Republic yet..
