

Abstract

The bachelor thesis deals with the operation and strategies of the United Nations in the field of implementation of women's rights in the Middle East. It covers the development from the approval of Security Council Resolution No. 1325 to the current implementation of the 2030 Agenda, in which, in point No. 5, the UN set out to "achieve gender equality and empower all women and girls". The main goal will be to focus on the question "to what extent the UN is able to influence the women's issue in the Middle East and implement the women's rights agenda according to the approved resolutions and strategies, and what methods and local organizations help with the implementation of these goals?" The sources are official materials and documents of UN Women as well as examples from the practice of selected Arabic-speaking countries.
