

ABSTRACT

The diploma thesis discusses the possibilities of training future of teachers of the Czech language and literature in the field of Russian literature on the example of the implementation of an educational course in the Moodle system. The theoretical part is devoted to the current state of teaching of Russian literature in Czech schools in connection with curricular and other binding documents, the preparation of university students - future teachers of the Czech language and literature – in the field of world (and especially Russian) literature, basic aspects of contemporary didactics of literature and practical possibilities, what the educational platform Moodle offers. The core of the practical part of this work is a fully functional Moodle course Russian literature for teachers of the Czech language and literature located on the university server. The created course tries to convey basic facts about the development, specifics, authors and works of Russian literature to future teachers of the Czech language and literature and to offer them elementary material support for their own teaching. In addition to the basic periodization, they will also get to know eight unforgettable authors who reflect the catalogs of requirements for the GCSE exam, as well as some works from the perspective of the historical development of selected literary topics.
