

Abstract (in English):

This Bachelor's work is concerned with the topic of expulsion of Soviet military forces out of Czechoslovakian lands, which was happening during the years 1990–1991. It is concerned with the occupation by Warsaw pact forces, relocation of Soviet forces into specific areas and specifies which buildings were used by them. It presents issues which Czechoslovakia was dealing with, caused by the entry, presence and departure of Soviet forces. Through documentation of partial meetings at the government level it familiarizes the reader with the negotiation of the Soviet forces' expulsion and presents separate stages of the Soviets' departure from Czechoslovakia. Simultaneously, the work briefly describes the results of the negotiation of material and financial compensation of damages done to health and property, caused by entry, presence and departure of the Soviet forces. Methodologically it is sourced from the publications by Marie Černá, Jindřich Pecka, Prokop Tomek and Ivo Pejčoch, which form the framework for this Bachelor's work, meanwhile autobiographical works by Jaroslav Šedivý, Michael Kocáb and Jiří Dienstbier are valuable sources for the times of negotiation of the expulsion and the departure of the Soviet forces itself. For the purpose of detailed description of the process of the Soviet forces' departure this work sources from periodicals then released, Lidové noviny, Nová svoboda, Práce a Rudé právo. Important sources for the whole Bachelor's work concerning the years 1990–1992 include the Archives of Ministry of Foreign Affairs, the National Archives and the Archives of the Chamber of Deputies.
