

Abstract

The issue of radicalisation is a contemporary and very pressing problem. In recent years, Europe has experienced a rise in radicalisation tendencies.

In my literary-review bachelor thesis I will try to introduce the topic of radicalisation. How it occurs, what can accelerate or, on the contrary, slow down this process or stop it altogether. In my thesis I will also focus on violent radicalization, what drives people to violence and also how to recognize violent radicalization before it turns into action. Towards the end of the thesis, I will also describe the ways in which violent radicalisation can be prevented and how the authorities work together to protect the population from violent radicalisation.

The aim of my bachelor thesis will then be to describe in more detail the selected methods of detecting violent radicalisation and to compare them in terms of their applicability to armed security forces in the Czech Republic.

Key words: extremism, terrorism, radicalization, detection, methods of detection, comparison, prevention