This bachelor thesis focuses on relations between the Democratic People's Republic of Korea and the Republic of Uganda. It examines reasons as to why these two countries decided to establish relations and in which areas were these relations beneficial. The theoretical background describes the development of North Korean foreign policy from the declaration of the DPRK in 1948 until the 21st century. Subsequently, it focuses on the relationship between the DPRK and the Republic of Uganda in the most important areas – economic, cultural and military cooperation.
