

The dissertation presents the results of our studies on animal models of psychosis. In the pharmacological model parameters are evaluated by behavioral and electrophysiological correlates of which are subject to influence by direct modification of the serotonergic and dopaminergic neurotransmission.