

This bachelor's thesis deals with the goodness-of-fit tests for Poisson distribution based on the Stein-Chen identity. Stein-Chen identity characterizes the Poisson distribution on the basis of expected value of transformation. In this thesis, two types of statistics are presented. Their asymptotic properties are derived. In the last part, presented statistical tests are compared in a simulation study.