The main aim of this thesis is to explore the taking of nicotine products among pupils in the second grade of primary school. The theoretical component describes forms of tobacco products and an impact on our health. The second part is focused on addictions, prevention and the treatment. In the end of this part the newest studies will be presented. In the practical part will be distributed 73 questionnaires among pupils in the second grade of the primary school. The questionnaire consists of eleven questions, which are focused on taking of nicotine products. Questionnaires are fully anonymous. The research was taken place in the small school in Kamenné Žehrovice, to be concrete in the sixth, seventh, eighth and the ninth grades. The first section of practical part ends with the evaluation of the questionnaires. The research is diffused with 4 interviews. Interviews have been conducted with 4 boys who attend this primary school (from the eighth and ninth grade) and take nicotine products. This part is also finished with the conclusion and the discussion related to the closing part. At the end of the research the observation will be implemented. 4 boys from the second grade tried to buy the nicotine products in six different places. In the end of this thesis will be written the final conclusion.
