

ABSTRACT

The thesis examines the similarities and differences between colonialism and Nazism. The study analyzes the ideological, political, and social aspects of both systems, including racism, genocide, and exploitation. Colonialism is presented as a historical phenomenon with an emphasis on British and German colonialism in South Africa. Nazism is examined from the perspective of its totalitarian ideology, racial purity, and genocidal practices. The work also addresses the theoretical foundations of postcolonialism and the question of how to teach about colonialism and Nazism within educational programs.

KEYWORDS

Colonization, concentrations camps, racism, Nazism