Course of the examination: Anezka Neckarova presented her thesis and then we discussed the reports. The main discussion centered on the point raised by the opponent - one of the tests conducted in the original thesis was missing in the thesis. The student pointed out that in the previous literature the results of those tests were usually consistent and that implementation of the test was beyond the level of her studies, notably when it was missing in the replication package of the original study. On the other hand, she explained the intuition behind the specification tests successfully. Since that particular specification test is nonstandard, the committee decided to accept this explanation and agreed on grade A.
