

Abstract

This bachelor's thesis topic is issues of Czech deaf people from a psychologist's perspective. This work describes a community of deaf people as a linguistic and cultural minority, their rules and habits. In the next part of this work, I am focusing on options for psychological intervention with Czech deaf people and deaf people from foreign countries. At the end of the theoretical part, I am focusing on the educational systems of psychologists on issues of deaf people in the Czech Republic and foreign countries.

Part of this work is research, in which the goal was to map the consciousness of Czech deaf people among psychology students and already active psychologists. The final discoveries I put in context to our psychologist educational system.
