

Abstract:

This bachelor thesis focuses on developing knowledge and using local and place names in Lomnica nad Popelkou and its surroundings. This toponomastic research takes as its starting point the inventories of toponyms from the 1920s, 1960s and 1970s. To determine the changes in the use of local and place names, the historical material is compared with the current data, which were obtained by our own survey. The collection of simultaneously used oikonyms and anoikonyms has subsequently given rise to a new inventory, including the characteristics of the named objects. In addition to comparing and forming the current inventory, local and adjectival names are analysed and classified according to both semantic (V. Šmilauer) and structural (M. Majtán) approaches.
