

Abstract

The bachelor thesis deals with the linguistic situation within the terminology of the field of information technology in contemporary French. The theoretical part provides an excursus into the historical contact between French and English, French purism and the genesis and particularities of the field of information technology, especially in relation to its terminology. The practical part is followed by an analysis of the occurrence of selected IT terms through the interrogation of the ParaCrawl parallel corpora.