

Abstract

At the beginning of my work, I decided to focus on the experiences of foreign women, who are an integral part of our ever-evolving society.

My aim in this bachelor thesis was to find out and try to explain how multiculturalism manifests itself in the Czech Republic from the perspective of foreign women living in this country. The thesis analysed various aspects of multiculturalism in the Czech context, focusing on the perspective of women as key actors in the process of cultural integration.

I analysed how multiculturalism manifests itself in everyday life, community relations and the relationship between different cultures and society.

In the conclusion of this bachelor thesis, it can be stated that the study of multiculturalism and the experiences of foreign women living in the Czech Republic is extremely important for understanding the dynamics of contemporary society. The findings suggest that multiculturalism is not only a matter of different cultures living together, but also about mutual respect, understanding and acceptance. At the same time, it is important to recognize that multiculturalism can bring both challenges and opportunities. While the richness of cultural diversity can strengthen society, issues relating to identity, linguistic integration and social inclusion cannot be neglected.

The results of the thesis suggest the need for further research on this issue and suggest possible measures to promote integration and equal opportunities for foreign women in the Czech Republic. It is crucial that political, social and cultural actors work together to create an environment that promotes inclusion and diversity.

Although each foreign woman has her own unique story and experience, she shares many similar challenges and joys associated with adapting to a new environment. It is important to give them a voice and a voice in decision-making processes regarding their lives and futures in the Czech Republic.

Overall, it can be concluded that multiculturalism is an integral part of contemporary society and its exploration is crucial for creating an inclusive and respectful society. I hope that this thesis will contribute to broadening the debate on this issue and provide suggestions for further research and policy measures aimed at promoting cultural diversity and integration in the Czech Republic.