

Abstract

This thesis will focus on the work of architect Karel Hubáček and his buildings located in the Liberec region. Since he was a founder of the SIAL architectural group, this group was involved in some of the buildings that I will present here. First of all, I would like to mention the Czech architect Karel Hubáček, who as one of the most renowned architects won the Perret Prize from the International Union of Architects in 1969 for his most important design for the TV transmitter and hotel on Ještěd.

The first part of the bachelor's thesis outlines in detail the civic architecture of Karel Hubáček's early work (1958 - 1976). These buildings include the Ještěd department store, the Ještěd transmitter and hotel and the Máj cinema in Doksy.

The second part of this work will introduce the residential architecture, which includes a house designed by Karel Hubáček himself and an arched house called Wolkerák, which he co-designed with the architect Jaromír Vacek.
