Abstract

The aim of this bachelor thesis is to introduce the correlation coefficients especially Pearson's , Spearman's and Kendall's correlation coefficient and their statistic estimations following with application on data and discussion on validity of their usage and simulation studies with intention to compare the power of tests of independence.