Resume

In this diploma work I concern the practical usage of the pastorational ministry to the imprisoned persons during the process of their resocialisation. The diploma work solves the cooperation of the pastoration, and in its frame also of the catechesis, and how it is follow up with the special treatment programs lead by specialist from the penological service.

The work also proves the evidence of the history of the prison chaplains and their cooperation with the prison workers at the resocialisation of the prisons. We also state the legislative basis of various levels that are necessary for this ministry, further we define basic conceptions of this work.

In the practical part of the diploma work we describe the extent and the way of practical pastorational activities of clerics and also the forms of their work with specialists. We also research the practical realisation of the catechesis and its forms in the conditions of the Czech prisons.

The main aim of the work is to prepare prison chaplains at the cooperation with the specialists on the fulfilment of the punishment purpose, which is the resocialisation of the prisoners.

The justification of the work is to argue that this cooperation is meaningful. It comes out from the natural historical roots of this ministry and in contemporary there are prepared legislative and practical conditions for it. At the same time, it is necessary to have in account that chaplain pastoration has, in comparison with the work of specialists, a broader frame and it can not be reduced just at a method.

The result of the work is especially the finding that there is no obstacle for the cooperation of the chaplains and specialists thank to the conditions that have been prepared. The examples clearly documented the forms of such cooperation. Practical extent of the chaplain ministry also shows that not all the people concerned take the cooperation into account. Therefore we see as a meaningful to use some parts of the work to supply the methodics of the prison chaplain's ministry.
