

Aim of this thesis is about effects of distance electrotherapy apparatus VAS-07 in rheumatic diseases treatment. Dissertation target the specific group of people with rheumatic diseases and research into effect this apparatus during therapy and interpret results with that. Aim of this thesis is detect effectiveness of this apparatus for therapy and patients behaviour during the therapy. The results will be statistical evaluated by confidence interval and Students pair t-test There will be case report of patient with rheumatic diseases in this thesis, that demonstrates the effects of this apparatus.