

Target of graduation theses is processing of nursing care in patient with diagnosed fulminant hepatic failure. This subject is specialized on specific nursing care, which is processed by methodology of nursing process. In clinical part I have focused on liver anatomy and physiology, then on characteristic of disease, its prognosis and with respect to problems I have focused on general and special aspects of transplantation too. In nursing part are processed nursing diagnosis with defined targets and their evaluation. At the close I am showing education of patient after liver transplantation.

This graduation theses shows very special and sophisticated nursing care about patient with fulminant hepatic failure.