

Paper would examine discrepancies in the perception of the patient's condition viewed by the medical staff and the patient himself and also its correlation with the means of transport to the hospital. In addition, we will compare pain assessed by the staff to the actual NRS10 scale-based value told by the patient; sex-related correlation would be also examined.