

The main idea of rehabilitation is a multidisciplinary team collaboration. In my bachelor thesis I tried to highlight the team work of the clinical speech therapist and an occupational therapist in people with language disorders. The main objective was to determine how closely these two professionals work and what is important for a person with aphasia. The re-search within the practical part was carry out by a questionnaire that I sent to clinical spe-ech therapists and occupational therapists in various workplaces. Respondents to the ques-tionnaire often mentioned that the work of speech therapist and occupational therapist blends in some situations. However, it does not mean, they do the same tasks. Both disci-pline look at the issue from their own angle, thus ensuring comprehensive care. The result of quantitative research clearly show the fact that in people with impaired communication is cooperation speech therapist and an occupational therapist beneficial, but in many cases is not the ideal level. The end of the thesis highlights the importance of teamwork.
