

The main theme of this thesis is the problems of drug related public nuisance in the Prague City Center. This problems affect almost all EU member states including the Czech Republic. Specifically, the capital of Prague was trying to solve this problem in the recent years. This phenomenon is certainly not new, but it ran out of patience. Possible solutions are many but they always depends on the particular company and their attitude to the solution you choose. The result to be effective both for society and for themselves drug users.

The goal of this thesis is a comprehensive view of drug related public nuisance in the Prague City Center. The thesis also includes research among those interested in this issue. The results of that thesis are those of the current status of this issue in the City Center. Prague and its options that would be effective to eliminate this problem. The work also includes a possible solution to problems of drug related public nuisance. The research results were obtained by using semistructured interview with 9 respondents. The respondents are the members of the local government, and the repressive part series, drug dependence workers and other experts on the drug problem.