

Wrong site surgery is in medical literature described as extraordinary but not outcast. In the Czech republic such case was published in the year 2000, but anecdotal informations from czech surgeons prove that the situation is comparable to foreign literature. From that time patient's safety in health institutions changed for the better. Following text describes wrong site surgery issue (not only) in the Czech Republic and the attitude of surgical departments and clinics to this topic.