

This thesis intends to describe current situation of volunteering in the Czech Republic to foreign experts. In theoretical section is analyzed social, legislative and financial context of volunteering. Furthermore the National volunteer centre – Hestia as the main important organization in the field of promoting and developing of volunteering and its main activities are introduced. Practical section is focused o non-governmental organizations working with volunteers. Qualitative research methods (case study) were used to investigate situation and management methods in chosen representative volunteer non-governmental organizations.